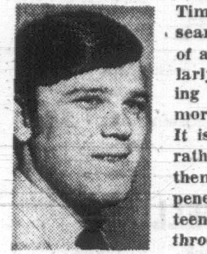
Victoria's Drug Revolution—It's Here Now



Hume

A University of Victoria student, editor of the Uvic paper The Martlet, Steve Hume, is working as a Victoria Daily Times' reporter for the summer. He researched and wrote the following story out of a conviction that use of drugs, particularly the hallucinogenic drugs, is spreading among Victoria area young people more rapidly than is generally realized. It is not intended to be a "scare" story; rather it is an account by young people themselves as to why the drug scene is penetrating so deeply, down to the early teen and even pre-teen age groups, and throughout all the economic family levels. All names used are, of course, fictitious. But the people are real — they live, work, go to school and play in this area.

By STEVE HUME

"A man without love is no man at all, but a cold, bitter wind passing by."

The radio is turned up so loud it vibrates, and the kids vibrate with it.

On the wall, carefully lettered with India ink, hand-written poetry covers the faded floral design of the wallpaper along with a clutter of op, pop and straight art from slick magazines and underground newspapers.

You know right away you've got Romantics on your hands.

The thread-bare furniture sags under the disarray of five sprawling figures, but except for one bearded, long-haired youth of 20, all look like typical products of parents and schools in North America's affluent middle-class.

They look like the kid next door in any fairly-well-off residential district.

All of them use drugs, or have recently used drugs, in large and frequent quantities.

Well-fed, well-dressed, they do not fit the stereotyped image of the "dirty, hippie drug-user." But all are deeply involved in the rapidly developing phenomenon of adolescent drug-taking that is rocking the foundations of Canada's accepted social order.

It is, of course, a phenomenon that has the adult world extremely worried.

The greater Victoria School Board distributes information designed to discourage drug use. Police are cracking down with increased vigilance. Parents are confused. Most important, young teen-agers are picking up criminal records at an early age.

And these are youngsters, the B.C. Medical Association points out, who cannot ordinarily be considered as a criminal element.

'Don't Call It a Rebellion'

One of the five kids, lounging on a broken-backed sofa, puts it this way:

"Don't say rebellion; it's a revolution. And don't ask what will happen. It's here right now."

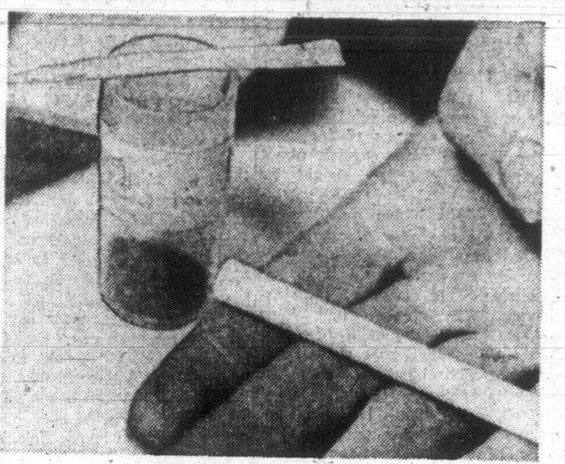
His name is Ted, he is 20 years old, a high school drop-out and he has been a drug user for three years.

Youngest of the quintet is Lee, a 15-year-old junior high school student. She is a bright, pretty youngster, and she's been "turning-on" with drugs since the age of 14.

Don is 16 and a Grade 10 student. He came into the drug scene at Christmas, he says, and claims to have turned on to everything "but the hard stuff."

With more than a touch of pride, he lists them:

Acid (LSD, a powerful hallucinogen); speed, (methedrine, a dangerous amphetamine); hash (hashish, a refined derivative of the marijuana plant); weed (marijuana); mescaline (a mild hallucinogen); STP (one of the most powerful hallucinogens); and cannabinol (synthetic of the active agent in marijuana).



He has not, he says, touched heroin, morphine or cocaine — the narcotic drugs with high addiction potential.

Two of the kids, however, are drop-outs from the drug scene, although both admit to being frequent drug-users previously.

Bill Is 21 and Married

Bill, at 21, is married with a small baby.

An American, he has the charred remnants of his draft and selective service cards carefully preserved in plastic, and he says he was a drug user in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Vancouver before he came to Victoria.

He says he has not touched drugs of any kind since before his marriage.

Mac, 22, is a Victoria boy and a university drop-out from two years ago.

He was, he says , a heavy user of drugs, and at one time was a dealer in hashish. Today he refuses to touch drugs because "they are not a valid alternative to any of the problems I see and face in my life."

All five individuals displayed an uninhibited interest in the idea of talking with a reporter from the Times, and the following interview rambled through the better part of an afternoon and evening.

Times: From your point of view, what is happening with Victoria's drug scene right now?

Ted: Two years ago you could count the number of heads (users) in town, and most of them were in their late teens and early 20s. It was definitely a post-high-school thing.

Why Drug Users?

OTTAWA (CP) — What makes a drug taker and what do you do about him? Those are questions Health Minister John Munro wants answered by a government inquiry.

Mr. Munro announced plans for the special inquiry and its terms of reference in the Commons Thursday. Key areas of study will be motivation of drug users and ways the federal government can reduce the problem.

Speaking to reporters outside the chamber, the minister said the problem may be bigger than the public realizes. He said he hopes to launch corrective programs after determining if drug use "has assumed the magnitude we fear it has."

And he made it plain that it isn't only drug use as it relates to youth that he wants studied. Many adults, he said, are given to excessive use of tranquilizers and are becoming drug dependent. The committee would go into that, too.

WANTS YOUTH

The five men or women who will serve on the special inquiry have not yet been selected but Mr. Munro said the accent will be on youth in those picked. The commission probably will have the first member in his early twenties to serve on such a body.

In nearly all respects the inquiry will be a royal commission. The only real difference between the two types of investigation is that the inquiry will report to Mr. Munro whereas a royal commission would report to the prime minister and cabinet.

The main thrust of the inquiry's work will be in the psychological and sociological fields, in pursuit of answers to why people take drugs and what society should do with them.

A good deal of information already is available about the medical and pharmacological aspects of drug use. But the inquiry has been asked to assemble everything it can on the non-medical use of sedative, stimulant, tranquilizing, hallucinogenic and other psychotropic or mind-affecting drugs or substances.

That means a whole range of drugs from LSD to marijuana but will not include the true narcotics such as heroin or opium, which produce physical addiction rather than mental dependence.

MUST KNOW EFFECTS

The inquiry is to report to Mr. Munro on the current state of medical knowledge about the effect of these drugs and substances. Some drugs can seriously damage kidney, liver and other organ tissue.

The inquiry is to make a preliminary report in six months and periodically after that, with a final report to be made within two years.

The inquiry will have a chance during its life to examine the effect of changes to drug laws now before Parliament.

The government has proposed a system of more flexible court handling of marijuana and other narcotics cases, in an effort to prevent attaching the stigma of major crime to irresponsible youngsters caught in possession of drugs.

Wave of Spring Turmoil Shows No Sign of Let-Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Administrators are invoking the rule of law against disruptive students at some of the college campuses in the United States, but the wave of spring turmoil shows little sign of letting up.

Twenty-nine black law students at Columbia University in New York began a sit-in Thursday night in the law school library, less than 12 hours after members of Students for a Democratic Society left two buildings they had seized Wednesday.

About 100 protesters ended a sit-in at Stanford University in Palo Alta, Calif., when 100 policemen were deployed outside the building.

Court orders were served on Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of City College of New York, asking him to show Monday why the 20,000-student school should not be re-opened. It has been closed nine days as black and Puerto Rican students barricade half the campus.

Security guards at Columbia closed the law library after members of the Black American Law Student Association entered the building and said they would hold an all-night "study-in."

DRAMATIZE ATTEMPT

A spokesman for the students said they would not block others from using the library. He said it was called to dramatize their attempt to negotiate grievances "on certain matters concerning institutional policies with respect to black and minority students."

Earlier, about 200 SDS members climbed out the windows of Fayerweather and Mathematics halls, minutes after arrest warrants were issued for them. Many wore bandannas over their faces in an attempt to avoid being identified.

SDS was demanding a larger role for Negroes in admissions procedures and an end to the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps and military recruiting on campus.

RADICALS OUSTED

NEW YORK (UPI) — One thousand white students fought 200 Negro militants and ousted them from the Queens College campus today after the blacks had vandalized college buildings for a second day.

Some 300 police surged onto the campus minutes later to keep the peace.

The militants, members of a special ghetto student program known as Search for Education, Enlightenment and Knowledge, had stormed the faculty lounge and smashed windows of the social science building and student cafeteria, forcing cancellation of all afternoon classes at the 24,000-student institution.

The whites gathered at the campus library and applauded speakers who urged them not to let SEEK students "wreck our campus." Then they followed the Negroes across campus edging them toward a gate and shouting "out, out, out!" and, "go, go, go!"

FIVE MINUTES

When the blacks resisted, blows were exchanged, stones were thrown, and one white youth was felled after he was hit by a wooden plank. The fighting lasted about five minutes until the whites managed to shove the blacks out the gate which they closed behind them.

Family Planning Or 'Catastrophe'

Massive Campaign Needed—McNamara

By RICHARD HOMAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a strongly-worded speech on the campus of one of the nation's most traditionalist Catholic universities, World Bank president Robert S. McNamara warned Thursday that a world-wide family planning effort "on a humane but massive scale" is necessary to avoid "catastrophic consequences".

"If there is anything certain about the population explosion, it is that if it is not dealt with reasonably, it will in fact explode: Explode in suffering, explode in violence, explode in inhumanity," McNamara said.

He ruled out coercive population control methods, calling instead for greatly expanded research, wider application of present technologies and "above all else," the development of "a realistic sense of urgency in all countries" over the population problem.

The former U.S. defence secretary delivered his 26-page speech as he received an honorary degree at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind.

He noted that "it may seem strange that I should speak at a centre of Catholic thought on this awkward issue", but he had "chosen to discuss the problem because my responsibilities as president of the world bank compel me to be candid about the blunt facts affecting the prospects for global development."

DESPERATE NEED

"The bluntest fact of all," he said, "is that the need for development is desperate."

And, he said, "to put it simply: The greatest single obstacle to the economic and social advancement of the majority of the peoples in the underdeveloped world is rampant population growth."

Rev. Thodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, later called McNamara's address a "thorough, reasoned and nuanced speech on the serious problem for which he has great responsibility." Prolonged applause from the audience of about 800 students and faculty "speaks for itself," Father Hesburg said.

Projections that foresee a time some 650 years in the future when there would be one human being standing on every square foot of land on earth "are, of course, unreal," McNamara said.

But they are unreal, he claimed, only because they will be prevented by one of three developments: "mass starvation, political chaos or population planning."

Since the population explosion

WILSON THREATENED BY REVOLT

LONDON (AP) — Political sources say an attempt from within the Labor party to replace Prime Minister Wilson may be imminent.

Reports of a plot against Wilson by some of his former cabinet ministers and other back-bench MPs are circulating in the lobbies of the House of Commons and appear today on front pages of most major newspapers.

One report said the rebels were discussing whether to bring a vote of no confidence against the prime minister at an early meeting of the Labor party members in Commons.

The immediate sore point is Wilson's insistence on pushing through Parliament this summer laws to curb the wildcat strikes crippling British exports. The party's traditional cornerstone of political support, the trade union movement, is fighting the legislation tooth and nail.

In Wilson's nearly five years in office plots to replace him have often been reported but never have developed into a real threat.

14-Year Sentence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wilfred Redlac was sentenced today in British Columbia Supreme Court to 14 years for kidnapping Mrs. Dallis Boultbee last May 28. Mrs. Boultbee, 50, estranged wife of wealthy Vancouver realtor E. Leonard Boultbee, was taken bound, gagged and blindfolded from her home.

TORIES SEEK TO CUT CODE CHANGE DEBATE

OTTAWA (CP)—The Conservatives proposed a surprise adjournment of the Commons debate on Criminal Code changes today, in an apparent effort to get the government to devote at least part of the House time to other legislation.

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, introduced the move as the Commons resumed debate on proposed abortion law changes.

Baldwin said he hopes the government will confine Commons consideration of the contentious legislation to a day or two a week, and deal the rest of the time with serious problems such as housing, Indian affairs, agricultural and economic difficulties.

In the recorded vote, the Liberals with the help of the New Democrats easily beat down the Conservatives and Creditistes.

The vote was 97 to 47 with 11 New Democrats voting with the government and 11 Creditistes with the Conservatives.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 154, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditistes 14, Independent 1.

Egypt Plans 'Retaliation'

Times News Services

CAIRO—President Gamal Abdel Nasser has given his troops permission to hit civilian targets within Israel in a retaliation against Israel's commando raid into Egypt Wednesday.

"I am announcing today that, in view of Israeli aggression againt our civilian targets, the whole world must know that we have the right to hit at civilian targets inside Israel," Nasser said in a May Day speech Thursday.

He added that "if Egypt did carry out commando raids inside Israeli territory, they would be carefully planned in advance, and cautioned other Arab countries against attacking without definite preparation.

Nasser also branded as a failure an Israeli raid Tuesday night on targets about 300 miles south of Cairo. He said warplanes, not commandos as the Israelis said, attempted the attack. He said the planes were turned back before they could do any significant damage.

This, said Nasser, demonstrated the improvement in Egypt's defence since last Oct. 31, when Israeli commandos damaged bridges, dams and a power plant in the same area.

Nasser said Egyptian shelling across the canal would continue until all the Israeli bases are destroyed. He hinted Egypt might launch a major attempt to re-take the Sinai Desert, saying: "Who could blame us for moving into this land?"

Once more Nasser said that the Arabs "will never give up any land occupied by Israel and particularly not Jerusalem."

"We will not accept that Jerusalem be annexed by Israel," he said. "We will fight to the last drop of our blood for the liberation of Jerusalem."

The Israelis countered Nasser's claims about the raid Tuesday night, saying an area that Egyptian officials showed foreign correspondents was not the target of their attack. An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said the Israeli commandos brought down six power-line towers and the power grid's automatic control centre in attacks near Isna and Naj Hamadi 300 miles south of Cairo.

French Cabinet Sets June 1 for Election

PARIS (CP) — The French cabinet, meeting for the first time since the resignation of Charles de Gaulle as president, decided today to order elections June 1 to pick his successor.

If no candidate gets a majority on the first round, the top two candidates will take part in a run-off election June 15.

Alain Poher, president of the Senate and interim president of the Republic, presided over the cabinet meeting which lasted an hour.

All candidates for the presidential race must submit their petitions to the constitutional council by midnight May 13, and the official campaign will open May 17.

Five candidates have so far announced that they will run for president.

They are former premier Georges Pompidou, Gaston Deferre, Socialist National Assembly leader; Alain Savary, former Socialist minister; Michel Rocard, secretary-general of the small far-left PSU party; and a 50-year-old Normandy builder, Henry Arrett, whose campaign platform is abolition of income tax and establishment of a four-day working week.

Nixon Talks Tough On Campus Violence

By SPENCER RICH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In the Nixon administration's toughest statement yet on campus violence, Attorney General John N. Mitchell Thursday called upon police, university officials and local courts to crack down on student rioters.

Asserting that students who seize campus buildings and disrupt university activities had gone far beyond the permissible limits of dissent, Mitchell, in a speech prepared for a Law Day dinner of the Detroit Bar Association, said:

..."The time has come for an end to patience. The time has come for us to demand, in the strongest possible terms, that university officials, local law enforcement officers and local courts apply the law.

"If arrests must be made, then arrests there should be," he continued. "If violators must be prosecuted, then prosecutions there should be.

'It's Not Defeat'

"It is no admission of defeat, as some may claim, to use reasonable physical force to eliminate physical force. The price of civil tranquillity cannot be paid by submission to violence and terror."

The tone of Mitchell's comments was echoed by two of his top aides — Deputy Attorney-General Richard G. Kleindienst and Assistant Attorney-General William H. Rehnquist—in Law Day speeches elsewhere.

Kleindienst, addressing a gathering at the department of defence, used the phrase "ideological criminal" to characterize some of the student disrupters. Rehnquist, describing the student groups and some other public demonstrators as "the new barbarians," said their attack "constitutes a threat to the notion of a government of law which is every bit as serious as the 'crime wave' in our cities." He made the comment in a speech prepared for delivery to the Newark, N.J., Kiwanis club.

'Stand Up'

Mitchells' speech was the third in three days bya major administration official on the subject of campus rioting, and by far the most explicit about how the situation should be handled.

President Nixon on Tuesday told the chamber of commerce that faculties, administrators and trustees "should have the backbone to stand up" against acts of violence, and Vice President Agnew said in Lexington, Ky., Wednesday that student activities "exceed the limits of permissibility.

Mitchell said he did not regard "seizures of university buildings and imprisonment of university officials" as "legitimate acts of civil disobedience."

He added, "students do not enjoy any special prerogative to interfere with the rights of other students," and he said "demonstrators do not have a constitutional right to cordon off a street, or to block entrance to a building or to refuse to allow anyone to pass who will not listen to their exhortations."

Seek Police Help

University officials, Mitchell said, should have ready plans on how to deal with violence, worked out, preferably, with local police.

In the event of a disturbance, they should consider applying immediately for a court injunction against it, and should call in local police.

In the event of a disturbance, they should consider applying immediately for a court injunction against it, and should call in local police, said the attorney-general.

"When a violent outbreak occurs, they should not take it upon themselves to decide how long the violence should endure and what rights should be trampled upon until local government is called in ... when people may be injured, when personal property may be destroyed, and when chaos begins, the university official only aids lawlessness by procrastination and negotiation."

Mitchell said the justice department had "substantial information confirming" that some major disturbances had "been incited by members of a small core of professional militants." He said these "violence prone militants will be prosecuted to the full extent of our federal laws," including the 1968 civil rights act, which prohibits persons from crossing state lines with intent to incite riots. (The justice department said it could give no details on any proposed prosecutions.)

College Aid Cutoff 'Dangerous Practice'

LEXINGTON, Ky. (WP) — Republican national chairman, Rogers C. B. Morton, Thursday rejected Vice-President Agnew's suggestion that congress consider cutting off federal aid to colleges that fail to discipline student demonstrators.

Morton, a Maryland eastern shore congressman, told a press conference here that his fellow-Marylander's suggestion is the kind of thing that "is easy to talk about" but dangerous to put into practice.

Morton, who was picked by President Nixon to replace Ray C. Bliss as Republican chairman in order to give the administration a spokesman, also surprised reporters by volunteering the comment that "all of us feel things should be moving faster than they are" in improving federal-state liaison.

MAKES HIS DEBUT

Morton was here for his debut performance before the Republican Governors association, that is holding its spring conference in blue grass country before the Kentucky Derby.

Agnew, here for the same meeting, told newsmen Wednesday that the "infirm" performance of college administrations justified congress in considering a cutoff of federal funds to students and institutions. That "exceed the limits of permissibility."

Morton said flatly he hoped it never came to that. "Before congress gets into the act," he said, the colleges should be given every opportunity to deal with the dissidents themselves.

He said "shutting the money off" is the kind of thing "that's easy to talk about" but would inolve congress in "arbitrary action, without the benefit of court rulings," on the performance of individual students and universities.

... FAMILY PLANNING

is greatest in the under developed countries, McNamara said, as the first step "the developed nations must give every measure of support they possibly can to those countries which have already established family planning programs."

In countries where the governments "are only dimly aware of the dangers of the population problem," he said, the developed nations "can quietly assist by helping with the demographic and social studies that will reveal the facts and thus point up the urgency of the issue and the disadvantages of delay."

He called for creation of "a new order of intensity into research into reproductive biology" among the technologically advanced countries, many of which have "starved their research facilities of funds in this field."

Research should range beyond biology, into demography and "the socio-cultural aspects of family planning," he said.

"What is imperative is the establishment of family planning on a scale that will stave off total economic and political disintegration in those countries where social progress is being seriously limited by the glut of unwanted births."

Through massive investments and capital assistance to developing countries in the area of agricultural production — an area in which the world bank under McNamara is significantly stepping up its activities — will "dramatically expand" the world's food supply enough to "buy two decades of time — admittedly the barest minimum of time required to cope with the population explosion and reduce it to manageable proportions."

Before the world is ready for a massive population control effort, McNamara said, several myths must be destroyed.

These, he said, include the assumption that "more people means more wealth" for a nation, that development by itself can cause a nation's birth rate to lessen and that the western world's interest in world birth control is "a surreptitious plot to keep the whites in a racial ascendancy."

A more dangerous myth, he said, it the belief recently expressed by British scientist C. P. Snow that "the time for decisive action is past and that sweeping famine is inevitable."

McNamara said he was cinfident that Catholics and "the fatherly and compassionate Pontiff that stands at your helm" agreed on the need for a solution to population problems.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET, JR.

There are showers that come down from the sky in the usual form of rain, but mixed with dust, soot, earth and other solids. Sometimes, people in various parts of the world are a little worried by such weather phenomena, but they needn't be. It is a quite natural occurrence.

The so-called "shower of blood" that once in a while falls on southern Europe is rain colored by dust blown across the Mediterranean Sea from the Sahara. A "shower of ink" is rain blackened with soot and other dirt, and a "shower of milk" may be rain mixed with chalky earth. Of course, you have to live within wind range of the source of wind-blown solids in order to experience such unusual showers.

Dustfalls, as they are more scientifically known, deposit millions of tons of solid materials from distant deserts, dry plains and volcanic eruptions over many thousands of square miles of the earth's surface when wind and rain conditions are just right.

TOLL HIGH SINCE TALK STARTED

SAIGON (AP) — Roughly one-third of the total casualties suffered by the U.S. and the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese in eight years and four months of fighting in Vietnam have occurred in the year since the United States and North Vietnam agreed to talk peace.

Saturday is the first anniversary of the announcement that Washington and Hanoi had agreed to send negotiators to Paris. Ten days later, on May 13, 1968, preliminary peace talks opened.

In the 52 weeks of fighting from April 27, 1968, through last Saturday, April 26, a total of 12,440 Americans and 153,779 of the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were killed in action and 79,793 U.S. troops were wounded, U.S. command figures show. South Vietnamese headquarters report 14,367 of its troops killed and 52,526 wounded in that year.

The U.S. command says that since the United States entered the war in force on Jan. 1, 1961, a total of 34,446 Americans and 488,231 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have died in battle and another 221,012 Americans have been wounded.

U.S. military sources say the sharp reduction in American combat dead last week—to 163, the lowest total since Jan. 11—indicates the Viet Cong's spring offensive has fizzled out.

The offensive began Feb. 23.

U.S. sources say North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units have fallen back to border areas to receive replacements for about 38,000 troops killed in their offensive.

Seven U.S. marines were killed and 17 wounded in a day-long fight Thursday two miles south of the demilitarized zone. Initial reports said at least seven North Vietnamese troops were killed.

Anti-Soviet Feeling Dampened

PRAGUE (Reuters) — A quiet May Day helped the new chief of the Czechoslovak Communist party over his first major hurdle, observers said today.

The calm Thursday showed the Soviet Union that anti-Soviet feeling has been dampened under the firm hand of Gustav Husak, who took office April 17 after the fall of reform leader Alexander Dubcek.

Husak promised a clampdown on anti-Soviet elements—and he showed Thursday that his strict line has toned down ardent reformists and avoided protest action.

Police easily cleared away crowds placing flowers at the statue of King Wenceslas here. Rain helped wash out the traditional student demonstration in a nearby park.

Husak has still to face May 9 when Czechoslovaks will celebrate liberation from Nazi occupation by Soviet troops.

Strike Vote Set

VANCOUVER (CP) —Locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees in Burnaby and Richmond have approved an executive decision to hold a strike vote to back demands for a 13 per cent wage increase over one year, CUPE representative Don Crabbe said Thursday. He said meetings of Vancouver outside workers and inside workers in Richmond will be held next week to vote on the decision. The three municipalities have offered the 2,200 workers involved a 6¼ per cent increase in a one-year contract on the present base rate of $2.77 an hour.

Cambodians Down Copters

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian forces shot down two American helicopters in the province of Svayrieng, the official Khmer press agency said today.

One of the choppers crashed in flames and was destroyed, the agency said. It did not explain the fate of the other or give any information about the occupants of the two aircraft.

The agency said the two helicopters were flying over a Cambodian police post at a height of 40 yards when police opened fire.

It said other helicopters and American planes arrived on the scene and engaged in a battle with Cambodian forces.

Laos Falling to Reds

VIENTIANE (AP) — The Royal Laotian army has suffered serious reverses during the current Communist offensive, diplomatic sources said today.

In assessing the military situation in Laos the sources said:

- Sam Neua province in northeast Laos now is under almost complete Communist control.
- Beng Valley west of the royal capital of Luang Prabang was taken by the Communists, giving them a stronghold on the Mekong River.
- The heights overlooking Brokhane and Vientiane plain, 50 miles northeast of here, were lost.
- Some 25 outposts in north-central Laos fell under Communist control.
- Route 13, the main Mekong Valley road connecting Vientiane with Laos's southern provinces, is impassable and 13 bridges are down.
- Two provincial capitals, Saravane and Attopeu in south Laos, are encircled and cut off.

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. . . . DRUG REVOLUTION HERE NOW

But the age bracket has been going down each year and it's at the point where a good percentage of 13-year-olds turn on regularly. A lot of the young kids are even cranking (injecting) acid, and I would have to say drug-use is proliferating so fast among the teeny-boppers that I don't even know how many are involved. It's a hell of a lot.

Times: How prevalent is drug use in the schools; could you estimate?

Don: I'd bet 80 per cent of the kids in my school have used or come into contact with drugs. I don't know about other schools.

Lee: I'm at the same school. I'd say a more realistic figure is between 30 and 50 per cent.

Don: Well, I counted in my English class the other day, and 16 out of 24 kids there are heads.

Times: Why is there such a surge in drug-use among school kids; what do you think the reasons behind it are?

Ted: Most of the young kids I know are just wanting to be accepted in the teeny-bop scene, but there's more to it than that.

Mac: It's the "in" thing to do—but the very fact that it's the "in" thing is an indication they're looking for something that's real—something they can relate to as human beings. As opposed to school, which they obviously can't relate to, or a cardboard-cutout cartoon home-life.

Ted: Their free will is being violated constantly by authorities either in the garb of schools or police and in a lot of cases parents. This is maybe the fastest maturing generation ever, and they don't want the almighty guiding finger pointing out the dotted lines and saying "Today you play rugby," when really they want to play kick-the-can.

Every time they light a joint they're saying, "the hell with you," and they've got a point.

Mac: A lot of these kids are turning to drugs for enlightenment. A myth has grown up, and they think they'll be enlightened by dropping acid. Because they want desperately to be enlightened they often think they are. Groovy is really a sunny day, and drugs don't tell you that; but don't laugh at the mistake. How many of you straight people get hung up on business or power or material things?

Times: What, then, have drugs done for you?

'I'm Happy All The Time Now'

Don: I'm happy all the time now. I wasn't before. School, you know, it's a lot easier to take now—I can really get a lot more involved in it for the first time. And I don't look at teachers any more, I just listen to them.

Lee: At home and with adults I'm unhappy. They make me sick when they talk. My parents can't talk to me because they won't listen to what I have to say.

I started at 14 and I used to do hash on weekends. I did some acid and now I don't do weed any more. I haven't had any for over a month, but I've dropped acid and mescaline in the last couple of weeks.

Mac: When I started I was looking for something real that I didn't find at home or at university. Something like peace and happiness and maybe a little love. I found out the drug scene meant separation from society and a burden of intense paranoia.

I couldn't achieve anything within myself through drugs, and the scene didn't help at all. So I stopped. Now I think I know where my head is at, and that's a good thing.

Times: How widespread, looking from where you are, is drug-use in Victoria?

Mac: I'd just be estimating, but two years ago there were maybe 100 freaks (heavy users) and a couple of thousand users. It's a lot more than that now.

Bill: But most of the freaks have gone away and are doing their own thing very quietly. Now it's mostly a great mass of high school teeny-boppers who need a few years to wise up.

Times: Where do the kids get their drugs?

Ted: I guess there are about 100 dealers in town, you know, people who actually deal and distribute. But they aren't really what you'd call pushers. Everybody who uses dope deals to their friends, and lots of teeny-boppers are weekend distributors, for example. But they don't push their stuff.

Little or No Profit Available

Not many dealers are really motivated because there's any big cash profit in dealing—there just isn't. If you pushed in an extremely businesslike way and had a tight market, maybe you could double your money, but I don't know anybody who did.

Mac: I'd agree. So far I haven't really seen anybody seduced into drug use, although I wouldn't be surprised if I did. As far as I can see the scene is deteriorating as drug use diffuses through the various sub-strata of Victoria society.

Times: Where do the dealers get their drugs and what are prices like?

Mac: A bunch of us would get together and buy a kilo (2.2 lbs.) of weed in Vancouver for about $150, then distribute it for about $10 an ounce.

That's the way it generally goes, and I don't think we ever made much of a profit off anything. Maybe enough to eat with.

Ted: Prices in Victoria fluctuate pretty much according to who the cops have just busted and what kinds of drugs are in ready supply. Right now weed is kind of scarce but acid is really steady at about $5 a cap. The other drugs break down like this: hash $12 a gram, weed $15-$20 an ounce, mescaline $4 a cap, cannabinol 50 cents for a weak cap, and smack (heroin) $16-$18 for a cap that you can crank four times with.

Times: How much heroin is there in Victoria?

Ted: There isn't all that much, but it's here all right. I know four guys who are wired (addicted) to smack and they've always got lots of it happening.

Times: Does that mean organized crime?

Ted: It's not organized in Victoria very much at all. In fact I'd say it was pretty much disorganized. But it's organized in Vancouver; the sources are pretty well controlled, and as soon as you start to have smack happening in any quantities you know the organized element will be moving in.

From One Source In Vancouver

Bill: The majority of dealers are getting it from one source in Vancouver, and he gets it from one source in the States, and let's face it, weed, acid, it's all been touched by the Mafia somewhere along the line up from Mexico.

Mac: The criminal element is definitely moving in. It's the next logical step, and ironically enough you can blame the police. If you make it impossible for the heads to buy dope from their friendly neighborhood dealer, then you create a strong market that can be controlled by limiting the sources and it's a perfect set up for organized crime.

Times: Doesn't the idea of organized crime and the Mafia scare you at all?

Mac: The Mafia's in big business, too. How much does that scare you? Sure the Mafia play rough, so do the cops. And believe me, Victoria cops can be rough.

Bill: Paranoia is where the drug scene is at, and that's the biggest reason I'm out of it.

If you're in the heavy scene with freaks coming in and out of your house all the time, you know the cops are going to notice sooner or later. You spend your time waiting for the bust and there's this intense, chaotic atmosphere constantly.

Like, you're walking to the window every five minutes and watching for the unmarked cars to pull up and the narcs to kick your door in and drag you off to jail.

I don't think that affects most of these kids, they're safe at home with their parents and they buy dope from their friends.

Times: Where do they get the money to buy with?

Don: Anytime I need money I just ask my parents and they give it to me. If they ask what for I give them a good lie.

Ted: That's the only thing that slows some of these kids down, lack of money and the fact they don't have a regular income.

Times: The police chief's report says they've found traces of heroin in so-called soft drugs. How pure are the drugs these kids buy?

Generates 'Up-Tight' Tension

Ted: I don't know of anything being cut with smack, it's pretty expensive, but it's possible I guess. I know of acid cut with cocaine.

Bill: I've never had any pure acid in Victoria. It's always been cut with speed and I don't dig that.

Mac: It's impossible to get any kind of drug in a capsule that doesn't have speed in it. And methedrine is the really destructive drug. The feeling I get from speed-freaks is run-down, worn-out bodies generating a lot of up-tight tension.

Times: Speed kills?

Bill: I was living in a crystal (methedrine) freak-house in LA and it was a pretty ugly scene. Everybody would be cranked up and running around constantly like rats in a cage.

Then there'd be no more to crank and everyone would start to get really edgy.

Cranking it gives a real rush, like a freight train going through your blood stream, but coming down is kind of ugly. That's why people get wired to it, from trying to stay up and not come down. It wears out your body and wears out your mind.

Times: How much speed is going around in Victoria?

Bill: Well speed means any kind of amphetamines, and there are lots of bennies (benzedrine) and dexedrine in town, but I don't think there's all that much methedrine.

A year or so ago there were only about 30 people in Victoria who were cranking crystal, and that was out of a couple of hundred heads.

Times: What happens now?

Mac: Well, I don't see any good things. The whole thing is weird. All these teeny-boppers are getting into the scene and getting hung-up. They drop in but it's a dead end. There's an alternative, but it's not in legal persecution that's for sure. It's intangible and it's a state of mind.

Heroin Traces In Single Find

Traces of heroin referred to in Chief John Gregory's annual report showed up in a seizure of methedrine.

The chief said it was the only seizure which showed any spiking of a harder drug.

He said in his report the harder drugs were controlled by syndicated operators. He suggested they could addict persons to hard drugs by gradual introduction through soft drugs.

Chief Gregory said methedrine, also know as speed, is a soft drug.

However, Dr. Thomas Bailey, assistant medical health officer with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, said he considers methedrine to be "extremely dangerous in the hands of lay people."

Prolonged use could result in "a rather non-specific breakdown over all the body, of both body functions and body tissues," he said.

"Not as a direct causitive effect of the drug itself, but as a result of the increased restlessness—not eating and not sleeping—the drug induces."

"It's like tampering with the generator on a machine, the faster your force it to go the sooner you can expect it to either break down or wear out."

He said addiction to the drug is "possible."

In people not familiar with some of the effects of methedrine use the recurrent bouts of restlessness the drug induces could result in states of "panic-type anxiety."

Chief Gregory said appearance of heroin in drugs like marijuana, which are smoked, seemed unlikely because no effect would be gained.

Two mainland drug experts agreed.

"The user is more likely to have his marijuana cut than have it beefed up," said Bert Hoskins, executive director of the B.C. Narcotic Addiction Foundation.

"Who's going to waste a $15 capsule of heroin on a $1.50 marijuana cigarette?"

E. L. Devlin, regional administrator of the Vancouver Food and Drug Directorate, said marijuana is likely to be diluted with oregana, a green grassy herb not easily distinguishable from the leaf of a marijuana plant.

"It's not illegal," he said, "and the customer is defrauded."

Devlin, who said the directorate handled almost all the drug analyses in B.C. and Alberta, said heroin has never been found in marijuana samples.

RCMP Act As Honorary Pallbearers

Today six members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police acted as honorary pallbearers at the funeral of a Canadian pioneer.

Lt.-Col. Christian Junget, 92, was the oldest surviving officer in the Northwest Mounted Police, forerunner of the RCMP.

He was born in Denmark and after graduating from military college came to Canada in 1899. That same year he travelled across Canada by cattle car to Regina and joined the NWMP.

He was stationed at Yorkton and rose to staff sergeant and then inspector in charge of the Saskatchewan district.

"We lived in the saddle in those days," he recalled in a 1966 interview with the Times.

In 1902 Junget was one of 25 NWMP officers at the coronation of Edward VII.

In one of his many trips to England to bring back prisoners, an extradition paper dated June 1, 1911, was signed by a magistrate, Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill.

Junget rose to the rank of inspector in charge of southern Alberta in 1922 and was appointed assistant commissioner in charge of the Maritime Provinces in 1932.

He served in the Maritimes until his retirement in 1936.

He moved to Victoria the same year. After his wife died 18 years ago, Junget moved to the Empress Hotel. He died Tuseday after a lengthy illness.

Whose Business Is It?

PRIME MINISTER TRUDEAU'S announcement that the federal-provincial conference on the constitution in June will be held behind closed doors is disappointing, particularly in view of the popular interest aroused by the television exposure given to the three recent similar conferences.

Proceedings of the last one, in February, were followed by an estimated one million Canadians, and the CBC received numerous protest calls when it decided to drop an occasional hour or so from its live coverage. The broadcasts brought an increased sense of awareness and participation in the nation's affairs, something Prime Minister Trudeau has always placed high on his list of priorities.

Why, then, the switch back to the old format whereby the issues raised at federal-provincial conferences were less dramatically presented to the general public? Critics of the reversal have tended to direct their fire at Prime Minister Trudeau, but this may be unfair.

The Globe and Mail polled the premiers and found that almost all of them were in favor of retreating behind locked doors. Their reasons were varied and not convincing. If there was a consensus it would reflect an aversion to hot television lights and a belief that more work could be accomplished in private. The premiers of course did not repeat the criticism often heard that some of their number take up the time of open conferences "grandstanding" before the cameras for home-province viewers.

But whatever the arguments against an open conference, they should be outweighed by the advantages. There can be no successful alteration of the constitution if the public does not grasp what is being done. What better way of achieving this educational process than letting the public "sit in" with the country's political leaders while they debate the issues?

At the forthcoming conference, in fact, not only will television cameras be banned but also news reporters, and observers from the opposition parties. This means the public will have to get its information from official hand-outs and possibly distorted off-the-record accounts of the participants. This is not at all satisfactory for a meeting of this importance. Can the people of Canada not be trusted with their own business? Mr. Trudeau and the premiers should reconsider their decision.

Pricing the Right of Appeal

THE $10 DEPOSIT WHICH shortly will be required when a driver challenges in court a police officer's assessment of demerit points against him will probably cut down the number of appeals. Certainly it will curb frivolous or clearly hopeless resort to the court. But it will also tend to discourage a number of appeals which should be made, particularly in the case of drivers who are unable or unwilling to hand over $10.

This is not a desirable situation. It arises, in any case, not from a wish to improve the administration of justice or facilitate the use of the courts, but merely from the protests of the municipalities that they were suffering a loss of revenue under the new system of demerit points which replaced fines.

There is another basic flaw in the arrangement. An appellant driver is appealing from a judgment and penalty set by a police officer on the road — an extension of judicial authority seldom granted to officials outside a court. When the driver appeals, he is not coming into court under terms which require the crown to prove him guilty beyond any reasonable doubt. He is in effect coming in to try to prove his innocence—a reversal of the usual procedure.

And the driver who appeals is penalized twice if his appeal fails. He suffers the demerit points, as in the case of a man who does not appeal, plus the cost of the court proceedings up to $10. This would not be as large an imposition as was the former system of fines, but it would in effect constitute an added punishment. The net result is that if you disagree with the policeman you can suffer an additional penalty—a questionable legal position at best.

Yesterday's Battles

THE VIOLENT POLITICAL ACTIVITY in Northern Ireland, with its heavy overtones of religious contention, carry an air of medievalism to much of the rest of the world. In few countries is the issue of religious belief still so important in political decisions, in few is the charge of bigotry still so commonly laid and so commonly deserved.

Premier O'Neill, who struggled for many months to promote the democratic concept of one-man-one-vote—which would have given the franchise to thousands of Roman Catholics now deprived of it by reason of property qualifications—was eventually forced to resign. His successor, Premier Chichester-Clark, has anounced that he will strive for the same objective, but is reputed to be somewhat more moderate in his championship. Even with that modification his path will not be an easy one. Serious street violence and mass demonstrations have marked the past few months in Northern Ireland's politics. Tempers, and religious tolerance, always short in Northern Ireland, are now at a deplorable level, and the public is in no mood to make concessions on the one hand or modify demands on the other.

While the rest of the world tries to solve the problems of overpopulation, the nuclear threat, East-West conflicts and world security, Northern Ireland continues to grapple on a political basis with antipathies that were more applicable centuries ago. Sooner or later the doctrine of ecumenicalism may make itself known in Northern Ireland. May the rest of the world be able to present a state worthy of emulation when that time comes.

Women Make Better Drivers

RECENTLY A PANEL OF EXPERTS testified to the World Health Organization that women drive automobiles as well as men do, and probably better.

The consensus of panel members was that women drive more prudently and are involved in fewer serious accidents. The panel apparently overlooked an interesting field of research: the possibility that by driving themselves, women also make better drivers of men.

What male doesn't drive more efficiently when his lady is at the wheel of another car and not rattling him with backseat or side-seat advice, caution and gasps of concern?

"... Agreed, then ... same as last year ... I whack him first ... then YOU clobber him ..."

MISINTERPRETING HISTORY

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

A Retreat After Unnecessary Mistakes

AS fair-minded Canadians must view it, Prime Minister Trudeau's most astounding and confused comment on foreign policy was made not long ago at Calgary. He said, in effect, that until his government boldly faced the new facts of international life, Canada's foreign policy was dictated, on an erratic, ad hoc basis, by military considerations when the process should have been reversed. Apparently Mr. Trudeau seems to think that under his predecessors the nation lacked a foreign policy worthy of the name.

Hutchison

It is difficult to imagine a more garbled analysis of Canadian history in the last 30 years. The reflection on such statesmen as Mackenzie King, Louis St. Laurent, John Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson is not only harsh but grossly unfair.

Most Canadians will agree, for example (whatever they think of him as a domestic politician), that Mr. Pearson was the ablest architect of foreign policy and the greatest international figure ever produced in Canada. Yet we are asked to believe that he was almost a stooge of the military establishment, even though the establishment was infuriated by his integration of the armed forces, wise or unwise.

With unconscious irony this criticism of his predecessor came from a man who totally misconstrued the world situation and the Second World War in his young days, and misconstrued the problems of NATO in his first year of office.

Earlier Positive Stands

The truth is that no other nation of its size was so positive, constructive and effective as Canada in the post-war world. Among other things, it was the first to advocate the creation of NATO. No state anywhere exceeded its peacekeeping contributions to the United Nations. And has Mr. Trudeau forgotten Canada's work in the Suez crisis so soon?

We can leave historians of the future to deal justly with our prime ministers, including Mr. Trudeau. What matters today is the fallout of the government's actual foreign policy, as outlined in its recent declaration of intent. That fall-out was instantaneous and could be very destructive.

Apart from the alarm of the European nations, when they heard the Canadian forces overseas would be reduced, observe the reaction in Washington.

About a year ago Senator Mike Mansfield, the Democratic leader, and one of the finest men I have ever known in politics anywhere, asked the Senate to approve the withdrawal of some United States forces from Europe. Then, seeing the Russian engorgement of Czechoslovakia, he withdrew his resolution. But after reading the Ottawa statement and talking personally to Mr. Trudeau, the senator warmly approved the Canadian move as sound guidance for his own people.

Undesirable Reaction

Thus the Senate drive to dilute the American presence in Europe was suddenly re-activated. And that is, or should be, the last thing that any Canadian government desires for reasons already outlined in these dispatches.

Senator Mansfield's initiative is widely misunderstood, however, in the United States and Canada. He has not reintroduced his motion into the Senate at this writing. Obviously he is waiting to see the prospects of the pending American-Russian disarmament negotiations.

Besides, he has never proposed that the Senate order or specify any troop reduction. He has proposed only that the president should undertake such a reduction at a time, and in numbers, of his own choosing.

For his ardent efforts to promote peace on all fronts Senator Mansfield has recently been denounced as an isolationist. That is a transparent and contemptible lie. But there can be no doubt that he represents strong force in a Senate and nation which feels, as Mr. Trudeau does, that Europe should provide its own conventional defences in the next few years.

However valid this view may be in the long run, the acute problem of timing remains and no responsible American statesman would wish to weaken NATO on the eve of a possible bargain between the United States and Russia. The Canadian statement, without quick reinterpretation, was calculated to have this precise consequence. Fortunately it was reinterpreted overnight to mean that Canada would make no specific decision on troop withdrawal until the end of the present year. Nevertheless, the psychological damage of the statement was considerable in alarming the Europeans and encouraging the real American isolationists.

Unanswered Question

Anyhow, the Canadian policy, delayed and definite as it is, leaves a vital question unanswered. Canada says that eventually it will reduce its overseas forces but it insists that it will do nothing to weaken NATO. Taking these assurances as face value, how many troops can Canada withdraw without weakening NATO, not mainly in physical but in psychological terms?

The early withdrawal of, say, half our forces would be psychologically dangerous in the highest degree. On the other hand, what would be the practical use of withdrawing, say a thousand men? No significant amount of money would be saved. Nothing significant would be added to North American defence.

Unrealistic

Finally it is unrealistic, at the present critical moment, for a Canadian government to say that it will somehow fit into North American defence the men pulled out of Europe because the Canadian government does not know what form North American defence will soon take. It cannot know before the United States decides for or against a new anti-missile system — a dubious and unforeseeable decision now splitting Congress and nation.

Above all, no fundamental decisions on foreign policy, in military terms at least, can be made safely in Canada or elsewhere until the true purposes of Russia are tested by this year's disarmament negotiations. Meanwhile, after manhandling the whole NATO problem and outrageously condemning its predecessors, the Trudeau government has retreated, at the eleventh hour, from a course of folly. But its mistakes were not only regrettable; they were quite unnecessary.

Letters to the Editor

Sewage to the Sea

I wish to clarify some quotes attributed to me which appear in a news item headed "PCB Ruling 'Not Enough'" on April 24, e.g., "Mrs. Ryan said primary treatment would probably improve the smell of the discharge and would probably leave the area 'healthier'." I did not mean healthier from a medical point of view. And "It (primarily-treated sewage to the sea) might make it safe from a health point of view, etc." Again this does not read as I had intended. Rather I was implying the fact that the medical officer of health for Greater Victoria, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, had stated that sewage to the sea is the only way.

I wish to emphasize that I strongly object to sewage in the sea, treated or otherwise, also that reputable biologists and pathologists would agree with me that this practice is a serious hazard to health.—Mrs. A. T. Ryan, Ganges.

Seal Hunt Attack

This spring it looked as though we might soon see the end of the cruel seal hunt at least as far as Canada was concerned. But now there seems to be a plan to discredit all who oppose sealing beginning with Mr. Brian Davies who is accused of profiting from his crusade. Before Canadians swallow this they should remember that this is the age-old way to destroy a dangerous opponent and that many honest and dedicated men's reputations have been ruined thus. We may expect to hear many more such slurs on prominent anti-sealers.

As to the charges of the Parliamentary Fisheries Committee where Mr. Davies was mercilessly grilled for hours and where only the member for Esquimalt-Saanich, Mr. David Anderson, defended him, everyone should remember that it was not Brian Davies who harmed Canada's image abroad; that was done when people all over the world discovered that the long romanticized seal hunt was in reality a brutal gory shambles not belonging in the twentieth century.

If Canadians are not to lose the ground they have already gained by their vigorous protests over the past few years they will have to make their feelings known to Ottawa soon. They can best do this by letters to the Prime Minister, the Minister of Fisheries and their own MPs reiterating their opposition to sealing and their distaste for the methods used to muzzle Brian Davies.—Mrs. J. M. Gillison, West Vancouver.

Looking Back

From the Times,
May 2, 1909

May Day was observed by the local members of the socialist party last evening, when a concert, supper and dance was held in the AOUW Hall. The affair was thoroughly enjoyable, and was voted by all the most successful social function yet held by the party here. There was a large attendance, every seat in the hall being filled. The party color was to be seen everywhere in red flowers, red flags and buntings.

Force to Meet Force

By JAMES RESTON
from Washington

ALMOST everywhere we look these days, authority is under challenge: the authority of the family, the church, the university, the community and the state. It almost seems to be the central issue of our time, but it is not really the main thing, and since the challenge is often to the hypocrisy and values of traditional authority it may even be a good thing.

Reston

The main thing is the resort to physical force and threat of force and violence against the traditional authorities. It is the old question of ends and means. This is what has been going on at Harvard and Cornell in recent days, and this use of force by the young campus militants is what really interests the Nixon Administration.

The Administration here is troubled by many things. It doesn't quite know how to reconcile its political, moral and strategic interests in Vietnam. It is confused by the struggle over money for the cities and money for the Pentagon, but it is clear about one thing: none of these problems can really be resolved in an atmosphere of coercion and violence.

The picture of the Negroes at Cornell coming out of the university building with guns on their shoulders the other day sent a shudder through this country, and the concessions by the faculties and administrators at Cornell and Harvard to the use of force by the campus militants have convinced officials here that justice is too serious a business to be left to university teachers and officials who submit to the use and threat of force.

The campus radicals, in their violent challenge to the law and the university and government officials, handed their political opponents a powerful issue. The Nixon Administration can scarcely believe it, and doesn't quite know what to do with it, but some things they do know.

Coercion Obstacle

They cannot make their way through their problems if coercion and force are to settle things. This is a sincerely conservative Administration, which believes in local political and police control. It came to power against the opposition of most university communities, most intellectuals and Negroes, and therefore has been extremely cautious and almost timid about getting involved in the campus conflicts.

In fact, President Nixon's first intervention in the university controversy — in his letter supporting Father Hesburgh's tough assertion of authority at Notre Dame — was quickly repudiated by both Father Hesburgh and the President.

But now the Harvard and Cornell controversies have brought the moral instincts and political interests of the Nixon Administration together. The last thing the Nixon officials felt they could do or wanted to do was to get involved in the arguments in the universities, where they knew they were not popular. And they are still holding back.

The reaction in the country against what has happened in Cambridge and Ithaca, however, is so critical of the universities that officials here cannot ignore it and are now talking about how the legal injunction process can be used against the militants.

The students and faculty on the left, paradoxically, are encouraging precisely the thing they fear the most. By their use of force, they are encouraging the political authorities they opposed to use the political and police power they hate.

Even a few weeks ago, officials in Washington would not have been suggesting that university officials rely on the courts to hand down injunctions against student sit-ins, but now they are doing so. And more than that. They are now asking why, if university officials fail to ask for legal injunctions against the militants, why should the moderate students not go to the courts and use the legal authority to keep universities open?

Not Legitimate Dissent

It so happens that the former dean of the Harvard Law School, Erwin N. Griswold, is now the Solicitor General of the United States, and it would be instructive for the militants to read his lecture on this subject the other day.

"Violent opposition to law — any law — or forcible disregard of another's freedom to disagree," Dean Griswold said, "falls beyond the pale of legitimate dissent or even civil disobedience properly understood; it is nothing short of rebellion . . .

"I cannot distinguish in principle the legal quality of the determination to halt a train to protest the Vietnam war or to block workmen from entering a segregated job site to protest employment discrimination from the determination to fire shots into a civil rights leader's home to protest integration.

"The right to disagree — and to manifest disagreement — which the Constitution allows to the individuals in those situations — does not authorize them to carry on their campaign of education and persuasion at the expense of somebody else's liberty or in violation of some laws whose independent validity is unquestionable."

This is the central issue — not of ends but of means — which Harvard and Cornell confused, and which Washington and the other political authorities are now taking up. It is a tragedy, for political and police power on the campuses is offensive to almost everybody concerned, but some authority must oppose anarchy, and if the university teachers, administrators and moderate students evade the issue, the politicians and police will fill the vacuum.

Why Are We Frustrated?

By JOHN W. GARDNER

(Second of a Series)

The diminished morale today stems, no doubt, from a great many factors—the severity of internal conflict, the failure of leadership, the incapacity of the society to solve grave and obvious problems, a visible disparity between the beliefs we profess and the practices we tolerate—but more than anything else contemporary demoralization stems from a breakdown in the relationship of the individual to society.

The breakdown is not visible to the naked eye, and its consequences come to the surface slowly. But it is a supremely dangerous condition, and is implicated in many of today's social ills, from apathy to violence, from drug abuse to juvenile crime.

It is widely assumed that the condition applies only to hippies, college radicals, artists and intellectuals.

But it may be found — in some degree — throughout the population, among employees of corporate empires and government agencies, among young professionals and suburban housewives.

Consider some of the more familiar symptoms as the individual experiences them.

He may feel powerless and useless in a vast and complex society. He may suffer from loss of a sense of belonging, of "connection," of meaning and identity.

Often he feels that the society has actively deprived him of his identity and turned him into a number, a computer card.

Let us admit at the start that we do not fully understand these feelings on the part of the individual.

★

Consider the feeling of powerlessness. We complain that in this complex world we can't control our own fate, our own institutions. But men have never had more control than they have in North America today.

So why do we feel so frustrated? Is it the enigmatic quality of the current situation that upsets us?

When we believed that the king or the courthouse gang were in charge, at least we weren't puzzled. Perhaps the most frustrating thing of all is not to know whom to blame.

Given the puzzling question, two opposing hypotheses emerge. One is essentially paranoid and says: "Evil people with evil purposes are running things behind the scenes."

This is the view of the far right and the far left (in one case the Communists and the other the military-industrial complex are the culprits.)

The other hypothesis is that perhaps no one is in charge — and that may be the most frustrating conclusion of all . . .

Contemporary critics often appear to believe that the smothering of individuality is a consequence of intentional decisions by people at the top. Right-wingers blame government leaders, left-wingers blame corporate leaders.

But the modern leader is always in some measure caught in the system. To a considerable degree, the system determines how and when he will exercise power.

And if present trends continue, this will become more rather than less so. The queen bee is as much a prisoner of the system as is any other in the hive.

We shall find it necessary to work simultaneously along two parallel lines: We must ask the individual to accept certain kinds of responsibility, and we must create the institutional framework in which individual responsibility is feasible.

For example, we must ask people to participate in the larger purposes of the community, and we must design the community so that such participation is possible . . .

★

Experts tell us that a successful outcome of the search for meaning, purpose and identity is essential to mental health.

The significant gains in the years ahead will come through a creative interplay of federal, state and local levels. That is the only kind of local leadership that makes any sense.

Local leadership in the old fashioned sense — wise in the lore of the locality but intensely parochial in its perspective —is dead. We must create a wholly new form of local leadership.

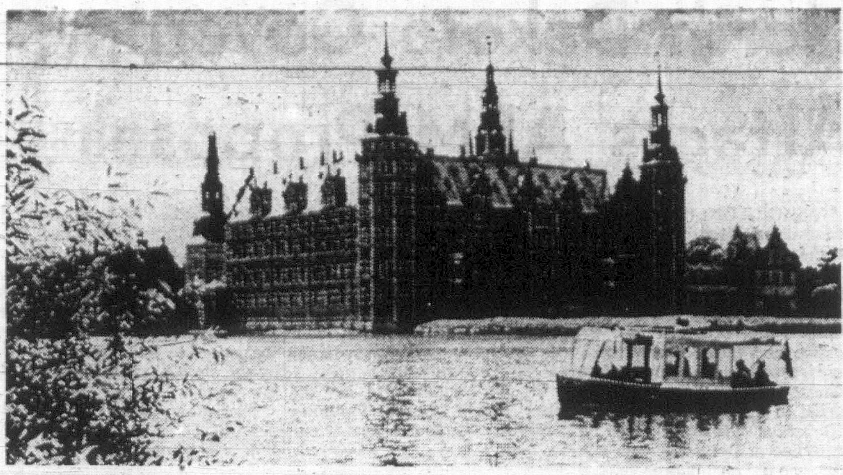
Even the alert, informed, exceptional American is farther down the path to the beehive model, more securely "locked in" to a specialist role in the society than he realizes.

He is more awed, more cowed by the over-arching systems that govern our lives than he would be willing to admit.

And the whole style of modern social organization erodes any sense of responsibility on his part, particularly as regards the possibility of social action. It tells him a thousand ways: "What you do won't make a difference. It's not up to you anyway."

In the abstract, there is no correct answer to the question "What can one man do?" If the overwhelming majority believes that the correct answer is "nothing," then the system will become one that confirms that answer.

But if any substantial number continue to believe that one man can do a great deal, then they will preserve a system that sustains their belief.



Modern visitors to Denmark find more to see than old Kronborg Castle, such as a visit to set where pornographic movie is being made. Complete end to censorship in country is being taken calmly by Danes, however.

Denmark Ends Taboos . . . and Life Goes On

By KARL E. MEYER

COPENHAGEN — In January, there was a slightly unusual church service in the low-income Vesterbo area of Copenhagen. Denmark's minister of justice was speaking from the pulpit to explain why he favored removing legal restrictions on pornography.

Among those in the crowded congregation at the weekday evening service were 23 newsstand vendors of pornography. They had been invited by the vicar.

Every Monday, a slightly unusual feature appears in the popular afternoon paper Ekstra Bladet (circulation 185,000). It is a question-and-answer column on sex with this motto at the top: "Happiness is to know what is normal, and normality has a spacious range."

The feature is so popular that papers in Sweden and Norway are now running it, and Inge and Sten Hegeler, who answer the questions, are names known throughout the bedrooms of Scandinavia.

When foreign journalists visit the only country where virtually all restrictions have been removed from the sale of pornography, they find that a once illicit trade is so open that reporters are asked if they would like to see how an erotic sequence is filmed.

First Country

These are among the consequences of a decision by Minister of Justice Knud Thestrup to accept the advice of experts by allowing Denmark to become the first country to eliminate all censorship of the written word.

Legislation which will do the same for photography is now in process, and in the interim there is little real restriction on what can be bought at "porno shops" on Copenhagen's Istedgade Street.

Danes do not regard this development as an "experiment." A leading journalist said almost testily: "Please do not write that it is an experiment. We have made a final decision."

The 68-year-old minister of justice, who is a conservative, is so weary of repeating his views on pornography that he declines to give interviews on the subject, and with reason. The issue is now about as controversial as the laws of gravity or the shape of the earth.

Danish journalists shrug off the pornographic books, and urge visitors to pay more attention instead to Inge and Sten Hegeler, whose question-and-answer feature began in January, 1968, and who now receive an average of a thousand letters a week.

The psychologist couple became known by writing a book called ABZ of Love, which has sold some 12 million copies world wide.

Gift to Children

When the book first appeared in 1961, there were complaints against it lodged with police. Now Danish parents not infrequently give a copy to their children as a confirmation present. Confirmation in Lutheran Denmark is at around 15.

Karin Lundin, a psychiatric case worker with extensive experience in dealing with juvenile delinquents and criminals, speaks for many Danes in saying that the Hegelers have done more good in a year than all the sex-education programs of a half century.

"Their column has removed the angst (anxiety) about sex for tens of thousands of people," she says, "particularly for those who feel they belong to sexual minorities."

Miss Lundin also shares a widespread belief that pornography provides a therapeutic release for persons who might otherwise injure others.

So prevalent is this view — which is outwardly sustained by a drop in sex crimes since censorship was abolished — that the pornographers have come to regard themselves as useful samaritans.

'Weekend Sex'

Leo Madsen, 37, the Hugh Hefner of Danish pornography, has a frowsy Allen Ginsberg beard and publishes a whole line of pornographic magazines, the most popular of which is Weekend Sex, which sells 18,000 copies a week in Denmark and 22,000 in Sweden, where there is also a tolerant attitude to pornography. A copy costs about $1.35.

Madsen says he has no trouble finding models, who earn from $30 to $3,000 for sessions that last up to 10 and 12 hours. Most of his models are Scandinavians, and their main motive is to make money. He says prostitutes made bad models and he will not use them.

"Would you like to see how it's done?" he asked. "Let me introduce you to Per Gunnsen, one of our chief photographers, and Giacomo Ganci, a producer."

I was then taken to a large loft divided into stage sets, some of them living rooms, some bedrooms, some equipped with torture instruments ("for the specialized trade").

There were three models in the group, Eric, Ula and Sylva, all Danes. Sylva was married, with one child, and posed for money with the consent of her husband.

What is the aim of pornography? The Italian-born Ganci, who is married to a Danish girl and has two children, says that in most cases pornography is a substitute for sex, but in some cases it is used by married persons to stimulate passion.

Most customers tend to be lonely middle-aged men, he says, and few youngsters buy the books.

Spanks on Bottom

By this time, Gunnsen is photographing Eric and Ula, who have progressively stripped. Ganci coaches the girl on screaming "Ow", as Erik spanks her bare bottom.

Between pictures, the models look ineffably bored. Do they ever get sexually excited? "Sometimes, but only for the photographs," says Eric. "When the act is finished it's all over. It's just a job."

After seeing the pornographers at work without furtiveness, one can ask: Why not let them ply their trade? The experience in Denmark has been that after a great jump in sales after pornography was legalized demand has leveled off and to most normal people porn has simply become corn.

A fairy tale by Denmark's Hans Christian Anderson seems apt. When the emperior with no clothes walked through the streets everybody pretended he was wearing something until a child piped, "The emperior is naked!"

They've taken the clothes off in Denmark, and life goes on as before. Are the conventional taboos about pornography as illusory as the emperor's clothes?

Turner May Gain Most From Hellyer Dropout

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Westell

OTTAWA—Prime Minister Trudeau has a delicate task in restructuring his administration to fill the holes left by the resignation of Paul Hellyer.

Hellyer has been far more than transport minister with the additional responsibility for housing and urban affairs.

He had also been designated deputy prime minister. He was the English-speaking minister with the largest personal political following in the Liberal party.

And he was a leading member of the Toronto delegation in the federal government at a time when that city is jealous of the power of Montreal.

●

It is always dangerous to attempt to forecast cabinet changes—particularly, when the prime minister has not yet made up his own mind—as many commentators have discovered to their embarrassment.

But it is known that Trudeau had been hoping to avoid a major reshuffle of cabinet responsibilities this year, when most of his senior ministers are in the midst of reviewing and redirecting important government policies.

And it is reasonable to identify the political and administrative considerations that are bound to be in Trudeau's mind in the wake of Hellyer's departure, without claiming power of prophecy.

If it were simply a matter of finding a new minister of transport, Trudeau need do no more than confirm the acting minister in the job.

●

James Richardson entered Parliament only last year and most of his brief experience as a minister without portfolio has been in assisting Hellyer with matters of air policy.

In other circumstances, he might not be considered sufficiently senior or experienced to take over such a large department.

But Hellyer has decentralized administrative control of the transport empire. There is an able and enthusiastic new deputy minister, Gerry Stoner, who moved to the department from the privy council recently, and he is working on a reorganization of the department which should make the minister's task easier.

And Richardson has impressed those with whom he has worked in the department as an executive capable of growing quickly into the minister's job.

Trudeau will also weigh the political advantage of giving the portfolio to Richardson, who is Manitoba's representative in the cabinet. He needs to build up his western ministers to give the Prairies confidence that they have important political spokesmen in Ottawa.

●

(He may also have the opportunity born of unfortunate necessity this weekend to promote Saskatchewan's cabinet representative Otto Lang, who has been acting energy and resources minister in the absence of Joe Greene. Greene returned this week from a lengthy rest in the south after his heart attacks to consult his doctors in Toronto to determine if he can return to the demanding life of a cabinet minister.)

Even a minister of Hellyer's energy and experience was finding it exhausting to act as both transport and housing minister. He had hoped to drop transport this summer to concentrate on housing.

But Trudeau apparently does not want to appoint a separate minister of housing and urban affairs. He must be looking around, therefore, to see to which minister he can attach the responsibility.

●

He may very well choose Donald Macdonald, privy council president and government leader in the Commons.

Macdonald has no department to run and, while he might not agree, some of his colleagues say he carries the lightest load in the cabinet at present.

He comes from Toronto, where the housing situation is tightest and thus most important politically. His Rosedale riding, in fact, includes the Regent Park public housing developments which became a centre of controversy after the Hellyer task force's attack on ghetto housing.

Under Lester Pearson, Toronto was the power base of the Liberal Party. Under Trudeau, the centre of gravity has shifted to Montreal.

The departure of Hellyer further weakens Toronto's voice in Ottawa, and Trudeau may think it essential to appoint a new minister from that city.

Bob Stanbury from York-Scarborough was one of his early supporters in the leadership race, and Trudeau has not hesitated to reward loyalty.

But if he really wants to offset the impression, left by Hellyer, that the government is not much interested in urban problems, Trudeau could achieve some effect by promoting Phil Givens (York West), former mayor of Toronto.

Givens has been agitating for chairmanship of a committee on urban problems. Trudeau could do better than that by making him a parliamentary secretary or a minister without portfolio to aid whichever senior minister is responsible for housing and urban affairs.

●

There is no real provision for a deputy prime minister in the government structure. When Trudeau gave the title to Hellyer in a casual reference at a press conference, it had only symbolic significance.

Trudeau must now decide whether to let the deputy PM title drop, pass it to the next senior privy councillor, Mitchell Sharp, or award it to someone else.

Clearly, if the honor goes to anyone else, it will be a rebuff to Sharp and a sign that he is out of favor.

But Sharp's position in the cabinet has probably been strengthened by Hellyer's resignation. Whatever Trudeau may think of his external affairs minister's ideas and attitudes of NATO, he could not lightly contemplate another resignation from his cabinet by a senior and experienced minister from Toronto.

●

Who else benefits from Hellyer's resignation? Probably Justice Minister John Turner.

Hellyer was well known and liked in the Liberal party across Canada. He represented in some ways all those English speaking Liberals who did not support Trudeau for the leadership and who continue to have reservations about him. This gave Hellyer political muscle, which can now be inherited by another minister.

Turner is the logical choice.

Gai Paree Not What She Used to Be

By CLAUDE SARRAUTE
Le Monde

Paris is getting older and sleepier. The night owls who once circulated in tightly-knit and slightly inebriated bands have been replaced by sober and self-sufficient couples — when they go out at all!

Today, as one approaches forty, the weight of the years and business responsibilities break one's stride.

Nights are not what they used to be: They are getting shorter while the days grow longer, and it has become harder to divide one's time between the nightclub and the office.

There was a time when the Paris businessman arrived at work in the mid-morning; now he makes it his duty to walk in as the cleaning-women are leaving.

Fashion requires that he be dynamic, efficient, forward-looking and over-worked.

★ ★ ★

His horizons are alternatively green, grey, and white; comes the weekend, and he is off to New York, Megeve or Milan, to Kenya for a safari or to the Bahamas for a quick dip.

Paris is getting emptier, Paris is getting bored with itself. The natives flee it, foreigners avoid it, and people from the provinces leave as fast as they can.

Modern air travel makes it possible for the manufacturer from Strasbourg or Marseilles to lunch at Laurent or Taillevent and be home in time for dinner.

Dining is what one does today; be it in front of the television, with relations, in the country or in town, one dines.

The older generation is drinking less, and the younger generation, almost not at all, and neither seems to take much pleasure any more in agitating to the strains of a stepped-up guitar.

They have left the dance floor for the table. Francois Patrice, one of the promoters of Paris night life, has put it succinctly: The emphasis is on "eats."

Where do people eat? In the 16th arrondissement, that bastion of the bourgeoisie, among friends; in the Latin Quarter, with pals. Pigalle is nothing more than a memory, a desert punctuated by neon signs for three-franc strip-tease joints and the turn-signals of the Saturday night down-and-outs who spend their time packed ten to a car hunting desperately for free entertainment.

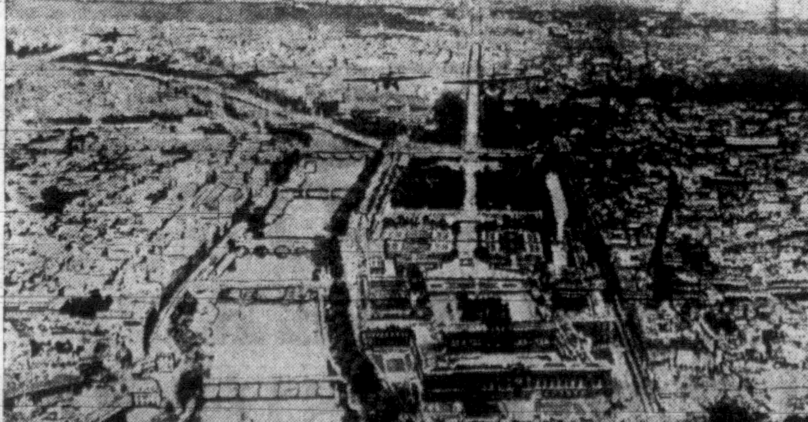
The Champs-Elysees is out of bounds: The Americans, the Germans and the Japanese have taken it over; they arrive in droves in tour buses, and the ill-advised Frenchman emerging after midnight from Fouquet's or Le Drugstore feels completely dispossessed.

★ ★ ★

Nightclub owners and taxi drivers speak a common language; looking over the calendar of the week gone by they use the same terms of pride or displeasure to describe the bottlenecks that have been their lot.

Monday and Tuesday nights they have got the boys back from their weekends away; Thursday, the people who leave town on Friday; Friday, the people who hate Saturday night crowds; Saturday, late Sunday sleepers.

On Sunday afternoon arrive the adolescents who have not yet lost their taste for afternoon tea-dances, followed on Sunday evening by their parents who leave before midnight, already preoccupied with Monday's appointments.



Where have all the pleasure-seekers gone?

Opening Again Delayed

When will it happen?

Victoria's new citizenship court—housed in the old customs building on Government Street—was to have been opened Thursday.

It was to have been opened by a federal government official in the presence of the mayors of Greater Victoria and representatives of the B.C. government.

Now it is possible the opening will take place June 2. If not then, it will be off until September!

"We regret that structural alterations to the customs building were not completed in time for the May 1 opening," an official of the B.C. Citizenship Court in Vancouver said.

This is the third time the opening has bern postponed. The court was to have opened last April. It was then postponed to September because the contract for alterations to the old customs building had not been let.

The contract was finally let to a Victoria firm last February and it was announced the new court would open May 1.

Meantime, the work of receiving applications for Canadian citizenship (from immigrants resident in Canada for five years) is being done by employees in the registry at Victoria Law Courts.

Applications are sent to the B.C. Citizenship Court in Vancouver, where they are processed. Judge Norman Oreck, president of the court, visits Victoria periodically to swear in the new citizens.

He is due here May 21 for the induction of 42 new Canadians at the Law Courts. In June—or possibly September — he may conduct this ceremony in the new citizenship court.

Fossils Discovered

WASHINGTON (WP) — The discovery of nearly 40 man-like teeth and two lower jaws may open up another two million years in the evolutionary history of man.

The find, announced Wednesday by a Chicago university anthropologist, appears to be almost four million years old. Until now, the oldest hominid or (man-like) fossils —found by Louis Leakey in Africa's Olduvai Gorge—were dated at 1,800,000 years.

An expedition led by F. Clark Howell, chairman of the Chicago anthropology department, found the teeth and jaws in southern Ethiopia. "We have discovered a range of time we did not know existed," Prof. Howell said.

The fossils are thought to come from two different species. One set of jaws and teeth, more massive than the other, resembles those of the australopith or man-ape. The other, less bulky, may be related to the South African australopith.

Prof. Howell and his colleagues are attempting to pin down more closely the age of their find. They are determining the radioisotopic age of the minerals in the volcanic ash around their discovery, near the Lower Omo River.

So far, the Howell team has not discovered any stone artifacts. Paleontologists in the past have distinguished men from apes by unearthing stone tools.

If none are found, Howell said, scientists may have to revise their standards and conclude that man-like creatures changed the food habits of apes without external aid.

North Dakota Governor Attacks ABM Proposal

WASHINGTON (WP) — The governor of North Dakota—one of the two states selected for the initial sites of the Nixon administration's Safeguard ABM defence system—has attacked the program as "excessive and unnecessary" military spending at a time when domestic needs "have built up almost to the bursting point."

Governor William L. Guy, a conservative Democrat who last fall won an unprecedented fourth term, made his ABM views known in a four-page letter to chairman John C. Stennis (D—Miss.) of the Senate armed services committee.

Guy's letter, dated April 16, includes these arguments:

- It would open the door to almost unlimited defence spending in billions of dollars at a time when increased domestic spending requirements ... have built up almost to the bursting point ... social problems can no longer be pushed aside in favor of excessive and unnecessary military expenditures."
- It "promises to be like other North Dakoat military facilities—obsolete before it can be built."

He cited three abandoned North Dakota programs: the practice of keeping nuclear bombs aloft on B52 bombers, the Sage air defence centres at two North Dakota air bases and the air-to-air nuclear missiles that were to have been carried by the state's national air guard interceptors.

The other state at present scheduled for an ABM site in 1972 is Montana.

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (Reuters) — Optimism that New Zealand will buy a Canadian nuclear reactor for its planned nuclear power station was expressed today by Jean-LucPepin, Canadian minister of industry, trade and commerce.

Following a 2½-hour meeting with John Marshall, New Zealand's minister of overseas trade, the Canadian minister said:

"Marshall said New Zealand would buy the best possible product, and we are therefore very optimistic."

Britain and Canada are rivals in supplying New Zealand with a reactor.

Two-Price System For Wheat Favored

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson re-affirmed Thursday his belief in the principle of a two-price system for wheat, but gave no indication that it would become government policy.

He told the Commons Canada should reserve the right to implement a two-price system—one price for exports and a higher price for domestic consumption—"in self defence" if other countries do it.

"I still agree that principle is right, but it's not without some problems."

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar), a former president of the National Farmers Union, earlier suggested a price of $3 a bushel for domestic wheat and International Grains Arrangement prices for exports. The additional revenue from the domestic sales would be divided among all wheat producers on a quota basis.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) said the Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba governments had all called for two-price wheat.

PERSISTENT ADVOCATE

As a Social Credit MP for Medicine Hat before joining the Liberals, Mr. Olson persistently called for a two-price system.

Thursday he said it is easy for the opposition to complain, but it is more difficult to draw up and administer policies that would cure the farm price situation.

The agriculture minister spoke after Harold Danforth (PC—Kent-Essex), Conservative farm critic, had moved a non-confidence motion saying the government had failed to deal with the "seriously deteriorating net income" of farmers.

The New Democrats added an amendment saying the Prairie situation was due mainly to "declining grain prices and reduced delivery quotas."

The majority Liberal government survived both votes 115 to 76. Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 154, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditiste 14, Independent 1.

Mr. Olson got a long list of suggestions for solving the problem, both from opposition MPs and his own back-benches.

Conservatives favored acreage reduction payments—paying farmers to take land out of wheat production. New Democrats preferred deficiency payments.

Albert Bruce Douglas (L—Assiniboia), a Saskatchewan farmer, agreed with both ideas, but suggested a 10-cent deficiency payment and a higher price for domestic wheat.

Mr. Douglas also urged greater use of the Hudson Bay route, an extension of repayment dates for farm loans and steps to prevent any increase in St. Lawrence Seaway tolls.

Richard R. Southam (PC—Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain) called for talks with Washington to get world wheat prices back to agreed levels, long-term loans to poorer countries so they can buy Canadian wheat and terminal elevators in Europe and Asia to promote quick sales.

INCREASE SALEMEN

Ed Schreyer (NDP—Selkirk) wanted an increase in the number of wheat salesmen abroad, either by adding to the Canadian wheat board's sales staff or making use of trade commissioners already in the field.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield charged the government with inaction and ridiculed the "review" approach to problems.

"The problem is how to get through this year," he said.

Otto Lang, minister without portfolio, countered that the government is tackling the fundamental problem that has dogged farmers for a century.

•

'Even Use Chopsticks, Drink Wine'

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was told by Liberal backbencher Ross Whicher (Bruce) that it can solve the wheat problem by getting in there and selling.

Opposition MPs cheered late in a Commons debate on Prairie farm problems as Whicher, a feed company director from Wiarton in Ontario's Bruce Peninsula, gave a sales pep talk.

"Last year we called on only 36 countries," he said. "Is this the way Coca Cola does business?"

Wheat salesmen had to go to China, speak Chinese, "use their chopsticks and drink their wine, whatever it is," and sell, sell, sell.

Tighter Curb On Cigarette Ads Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States television industry, acting as a congressional hearing into the smoking and health controversy drew to a close, says tighter voluntary controls on cigarette advertising are not necessary for the time being.

The television review board of the National Association of Broadcasters said Thursday it has "decided to keep the matter of cigarette advertising under continuing review and that no further actions are necessary at this time." The board action was taken Wednesday, an association official said.

Current voluntary association controls ban smoking commercials aimed at the young, endorsements by athletes and the making of medical claims.

The Federal Trade Commission has served notice it wants to toughen warnings on cigarette packages and extend it to advertising.

The Federal Communications Commission also has suggested a ban on radio and television advertising of cigarettes.

Some independent television groups have dropped all cigarette advertising. They were joined Thursday by a major metropolitan newspaper, the Boston Globe.

The Globe and the Christian Science Monitor are the only major daily newspapers to ban cigarette ads.

Course Suggested For Adult Deaf

A course in sign language for the deaf and those wishing to communicate with them may be included in next fall's adult education program of the Greater Victoria School Board.

Reg Mylrea, co-ordinator of the adult education program, saw a recent Times' story announcing the formation of a society for the deaf. The story prompted his suggestion for such a course.

Mrs. Frances Pusnik, 650 Linden Ave., who spearheaded the formation of the society, this week announced that the group has now registered under the Societies' Act as the Victoria Society for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing.

Previously the group had decided to call itself the Victoria Branch, Western Institute for the Deaf.

The name was changed, Mrs. Pusnik says, because the Western Institute for the Deaf (a Vancouver group) was in no position to lend assistance.

The immediate objective of the local group is the creation of a centre which would provide elderly deaf people with full board and room at a cost of $98 a month.

The centre would also cater to young deaf people "in order that the two generations can keep in touch with each other".

The group has set an immediate target of $8,000 which it hopes to raise through donations and other projects.

An account in the society's name has been opened at the Bank of Montreal's Douglas Street branch. Mrs. Pusnik hopes the Victorians "from Premier Bennett down, will open their ears . . . and their hearts . . . and give to help the deaf find their own place in the community. All it needs is $1 from each person."

Friends of Mrs. Pusnik, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hubner, have offered to show movies, taken on a year-long world tour, to help raise the necessary funds. Showings will be held at First United Church May 21 and 22 at 8 p.m. and the Oak Bay Junior High School June 2 and 3 at the same time. The dates will be announced later.

Mrs. Pusnik reports that there are 33 deaf people known to be living in the Greater Victoria area "besides all those we don't know about, and those up-Island."

The next meeting will be held Sunday, May 18, at 3 p.m. at Metropolitan United Church hall.

Indians Unhappy With Conference

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of Canada's 260,000 Indians agreed Thursday that first-round consultations between themselves and the government on changes to the Indian Act were a failure.

In a unanimous vote they established one national and several regional committees to investigate and research their rights and to present to the government their own draft for a new Indian Act after consulting with their people.

A major hitch to their plans is the need for more than $500,000 to carry out the work they want to do. Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, who is asked by a resolution to provide the funds, said he would consider the request.

Chretien, who spent the full day attending the national Indian conference, said he had a similar request for funds from the National Indian Brotherhood.

He said he had to decide who speaks for all of the Indians and whether the delegates to the conference were empowered by their bands to undertake to task they set themselves.

Andrew Nicholas, vice-president of the New Brunswick Union of Indians, told Chretien that the consultation round at Moncton, N.B., on the Indian Act was of no value.

Peter Dubois of Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., said he had "thrown out the window" a booklet prepared by the Indian affairs department which was in the form of 34 questions and was designed to lay the groundwork for the 17 regional meetings.

All questions were based on the Indian Act. At the regional meetings and again at the national conference, Indians almost totally ignored the Act in favor of discussions of their treaty and other rights.

Red Shield Residential Blitz Monday

The raising of a flag at the Causeway Thursday marked the opening of the Salvation Army's Red Shield Appeal.

The appeal will be held throughout the month of May with a residential "blitz" on Monday, says publicity chairman Wilf Dick.

City officers in the organization hope to raise $78,700, only $400 more than was gathered during last year's drive, and they aren't too nervous about not reaching this goal, said Dick.

HULL TO HELP

Hockey star Bobby Hull is active in commercials and movie trailers for this year's campaign, he said.

In the Victoria area, funds from the drive will go to the Harbor Light, Matson Lodge, and help for unwed mothers and youngsters with problems.

Last year's expenditure in Greater Victoria was $535,870.

LATE SNOW IN MOUNTAINS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial weather office said Thursday late snow was falling on mountains in North Vancouver and a mild blizzard was reported at Allison Pass on the Southern Trans-Canada Highway, 150 miles east of here. A weather office official said the freezing level dropped to 2,500 feet.

China Good Market For Pulp: Berger

By JOHN MIKA

The provincial government should follow up pulp exports to Japan with an all-out effort to penetrate the mainland China market, Opposition Leader Tom Berger said Thursday.

He told a press conference here that an NDP government would strive to develop a pulp market in China and also would intensify research efforts to utilize all wood now wasted in the pulping process.

"British Columbia has penetrated the Japanese market now and I think the government should be working hard to penetrate the Chinese market," Berger said.

"Because of the nature of China's depleted forest resources, there is a great market there for the B.C. forest industry and a New Democratic Party government would work hard to develop it."

50 PER CENT WASTED

Berger also said 50 per cent of the wood used in the pulping process "is just dumped into the river" with waste effluent because of the methods used and the lack of a recovery technique to turn it into a useful byproduct.

"This is an area which really cries out for the government working closely with the industry in research and, again, an NDP government would do so."

Berger struck back at criticisms by J. V. Clyne, head of MacMillan Boedel Ltd., that NDP demands for more taxation of forest companies would price the industry out of the world market.

Clyne has said his firm now pays $60 million in taxes to the various levels of government and its profit was only $38 million.

BIG PROFITS

Berger replied that this still was an "enormous" profit and the industry had no real fear of pricing itself out of any market.

"Mr. Clyne can huff and puff all he wants, but the facts are that we are getting 50 per cent less for our timber than the State of Washington," said the NDP leader.

"He is just using scare tactics. This is following too closely in the footsteps of Premier Bennett."

He claimed the MB profit statement was "artifically low" because it had increased its depreciation allowance 25 per cent and its retained earnings 20 per cent in the past year.

He also contended the B.C. forest firms have an invisible bonus of $12.50 per thousand board feet of lumber shipped to the U.S. because they pay their employees in Canadian funds but receive payment for shipments in premium U.S. dollars.

RESERVES

"The facts show we have a commanding position in the U.S. market and we have in B.C. the greatest reserves of timber of any place in the world outside of Russia," he said.

"Our exports are increasing year by year and our prices keep going up."

He said an NDP government would conduct a full investigation of present resource taxation to determine "what the proper rate should be—and it would be a lot higher than it is now."

Berger also tangled with Resources Minister Ray Williston over pollution control policies he said were not being enforced against pulp effluent damage to fish runs.

He recalled that Williston had admitted in the last session that Northwood pulp mill at Prince George violated Pollution Control Board standards despite warnings.

Williston, replying to reporters, said B.C.'s pollution control standards for pulp mills are "20 times better than anywhere else."

He said although the standards are not enforced fully they are met to a degree not required in other provinces.

"Absolutely no harm is being done to anything," he said, although he admitted Fraser River fish may have been harmed by the Northwood effluent in the past.

Williston said he did not want to shut down any mills to enforce the regulations but preferred to save the jobs by pushing companies to improve their operations.

NEW head of the U.S. Peace Corps is Joseph H. Blatchford, 34. He says he would like to change the volunteer agency into more of a co-operative venture with a larger role going to the host countries. He also wants more corpsmen who have technical skills. (AP Wirephoto)

Brick Ownership Waits on Words

VANCOUVER (CP)—A British Columbia Supreme Court suit by Chris Valouch for all or half of a $50,000 gold brick his wife won last summer at the Pacific National Exhibition was adjourned Thursday while lawyers prepare written arguments for Mr. Justice T. W. Brown.

Mrs. Lorraine Valouch won the brick, which she took in the form of cash, in a draw at the fair. Mr. Valouch claimed he is entitled to the prize or half of it because she bought the entry blank at his request with money he had given her.

He also claimed there was an unwritten agreement between them that they would evenly split their winnings at bingo and other games of chance at the PNE.

Mrs. Valouch claimed there was no such agreement and that the money was to pay for rides and food for their children who had accompanied them.

Mr. Justice Brown was told the Valouch marriage had been in difficulty.

Driver Suffers Head Injuries

Edward Biggs, 41, of 909 McNaughton, is in good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital after an accident at Gorge and Albina Thursday night.

He suffered head and leg injuries.

Police said his car, eastbound on Gorge was in collision with an oncoming vehicle. Biggs' car then struck a utility pole.

Driver of the other car, Edwin Farnden, 39, of 1064 Gosper was not injured. Damage to his car was $250.

Biggs' car was heavily damaged.

ISLAND DEVASTATED BY RAGING TYPHOON

MANILA (AP) — A typhoon last week killed at least 24 persons and devastated a populated island off the tip of Mindanao, in the Philippines, it was reported today.

A Manila Times reporter who flew over Siargao Island said coastal towns on the Pacific Ocean appeared demolished.

Almost all the buildings on the island, including its 385 schoolhouses, were roofless or destroyed, he said.

The Times said officials on the island reported that 10,000 of their island's 12,000 families were homeless.

Two million coconut trees were felled or destroyed and 90 per cent of the island's crops were damaged, the newspaper said.

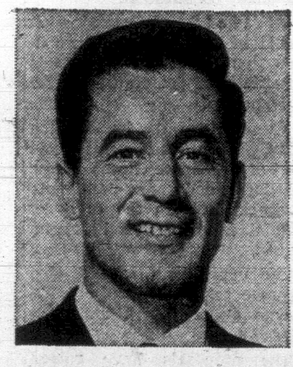
P.J. luck runs in the family



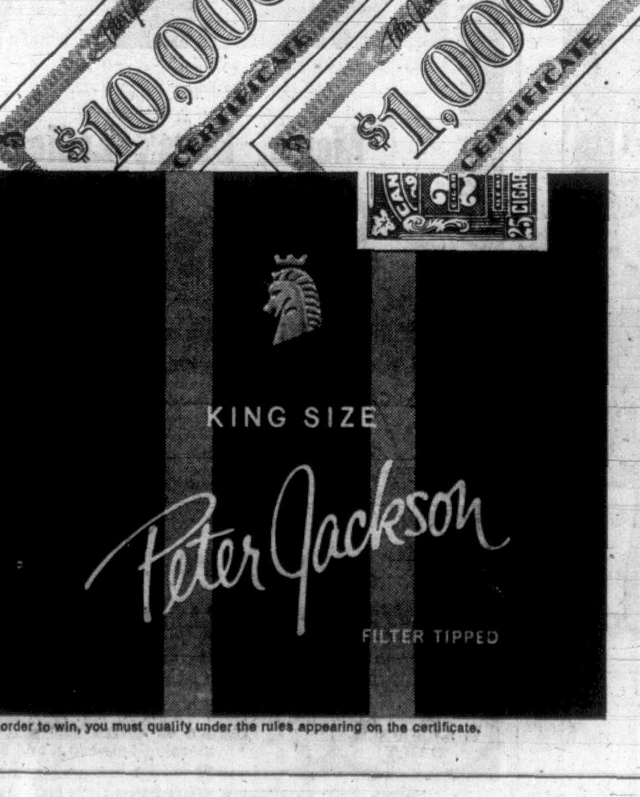
he won $1,000...

now she wins $10,000

Mrs. Charmaine Gigliuk of 87 Glenpatrick Drive, Calgary, thought her chances for finding a P.J. cash certificate were pretty slim. After all, her husband had won $1,000 from Peter Jackson last year!

Well Mrs. Gigliuk found something even better than a P.J. $1,000 cash certificate . . . she found one that's worth $10,000! And that's $10,000 tax free!

So if you've already won P.J. cash don't give up. You could easily win some more!



In order to win, you must qualify under the rules appearing on the certificate.

Indian Apartheid Call by Miss Horn

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — A call for Indian apartheid has been sounded by a Canadian Indian princess.

Kahn-Tineta Horn of Caughnawaga, Que., made the call Thursday at the opening session of a three-day conference of Indian youth at Western Washington State College.

Miss Horn told the 100 delegates from the United States and Canada that they should stop trying to enter the white society and go back to the reservation.

In Seattle, the daughter of a leader of a loosely-knit Indian movement, Laur McCloud, 17, of nearby Yelm, said Miss Horn and Vine Deloria Jr., an organizer of the National Congress of American Indians and the National Indian Council, both appeared to want young Indians to hate whites.

She also said Miss Horn had called for Indian racism and spoke against "breeds—white contamination of the cream of the Indian crop."

Plane Purchase Draws Criticism

OTTAWA (CP) — A piece of military hardware costing the Canadian taxpayer $212,000,000 got close scrutiny Thursday from the Commons committee on defence and external affairs.

Purchase of the CF-5 fighter-bomber was described by former defence minister Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) as "the most ill-considered expenditure we've ever made, in my view, in defence."

Dr. J. C. Arnell, assistant deputy minister of defence for financial affairs, conceded that the role of the supersonic aircraft is in doubt. It was "under review like everything else" in the defence field.

The defence department has ordered 115 of the American-designed planes, produced under licence by Canadair Ltd. of Montreal, at a cost of just under $2,000,000 each. The first 14 have already been delivered to Canada's armed forces.

Brig. Gen. D. R. Adamson, director general of air operations at defence headquarters, said the plane was ordered for close support of Canadian ground forces in a war, for attacking enemy supply lines and for reconnaissance.

It could also "at some time" become a replacement for the air force's training plane, the subsonic T-33.

Its future now depends on the outcome of the government's current defence review.

Springboard for the exchange was a Canadian Press story Monday which said the air force is beginning to take delivery of the CF-5 even though no specific role has been assigned to it.

Dr. Arnell told committee members that the decision to purchase the CF-5 was taken four years ago in line with a military re-equipment program as laid down in the 1964 white paper on defence.

That five-year program had been faithfully followed in the intervening years, though the total cost probably will run closer to $1,750,000,000 than the $1,500,000,000 originally forecast.

"I think that's pretty good," said Dr. Arnell. The original estimate had been based on calculations that costs would rise three per cent annually, although they have risen more rapidly.

Dr. Arnell outlined what he called a "rational history" of deliberations that preceded the decision to purchase the plane, going back to 1962. It was only in the "short here and now" that the calculations may not appear to make as much sense as they did before.

However the original considerations were applicable "if you leave the concepts as they are."

The committee approved defence department spending estimates for the 1969-70 year totalling $1,616,000,000.

Senate May Make Study Of Its Role

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposal that the Senate itself take a hand in discussions on its place in Confederation was advanced in the upper house Thursday.

Senator Daniel Lang (L—Ontario) gave notice of a motion for a special committee to study the role of the Senate within the Canadian constitution.

Its field of examination would include provincial proposals put before February's constitutional conference by the government.

These proposals include the possibility of having at least part of the Senate chosen by the provinces, and giving the Senate a special role in the areas of official languages and human rights.

The upper house would also approve nominations of Supreme Court judges and ambassadors.

The proposals have raised some criticism in the Senate on the ground that it was not consulted before they were advanced.

Yugoslav Policy Draws Sharp Russian Needle

MOSCOW (WP)—Pravda has resumed its periodic needling of Yugoslavia's independent communists after a lull of several weeks, which some observers had thought might lead to an improvement in the tense Moscow-Belgrade relations.

In an article on Proletarian Internationalism signed by E. Chekharin, Pravda also hammered away at China and defended Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia.

Pravda said "anone who tries, by means of nationalist demagogy about 'limited sovereignty,' to undermine brotherly solidarity and the mutual support of socialist countries in the struggle against external and internal reaction, plays into the hands of the enemies of socialism."

JUSTIFIES INVASION

Yugoslavia's Marshal Josip Tito has been the foremost critic of the theory of limited sovereighty, a theory commonly known as the Brezhnev Doctrine. According to the theory, the Soviet Union and its friends have a right to intervene inside any communist country if they believe "socialism" to be endangered. The theory was produced to justify the invasion of Czechoslovakia and later given Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid I. Brezhnev's personal imprimatur in a speech last November in Warsaw.

The Brezhnev Doctrine is considered unacceptable by the Italian and several other West European communist parties, as well as by the Yugoslavs, Rumanians and Chinese who fear it might be applied to them next. There had been speculation here that the doctrine might be quietly shelved in order to ease preparations for the May 23 preparatory meeting of communist parties which is supposed to pave the way for a summit June 5. However, some observers believe the doctrine to be more important to certain Kremlin elements than the conference.

YUGOSLAVS CRITICIZED

Pravda made clear its principle displeasure was with the Yugoslavs in another passage which declared "there are essentially no neutrals in the struggle between the two world systems. All classes, parties and states express their relations toward that struggle. The pretence of standing outside that struggle, presenting it as some kind of clash of two military-political blocs, is in fact a petty bourgeois-nationalist manoeuvre with the purpose of exploiting contemporary contradictions for ones limited and falsely understood national interests."

Yugoslavia has condemned both American activities in Vietnam and Soviet activities in Czechoslovakia, as well as the division of Europe into blocs. Yugoslav attempts to rally a large group of "non-aligned" states have met with increasing hostility from the Kremlin since the fall of Nikita Khrushchev in October, 1964.

THEORETICAL POLEMICS

In various theoretical polemics over the past year, the Soviets have made it plain that they consider neutrality and non-alignment useful when states are "neutral for" the Kremlin, or at least "neutral against" the United States and China. The Yugoslavs, particularly in the past year, have sought to be "neutral—period."

Their present neutrality in the Sino-Soviet dispute—they had previously supported Khrushchev's coexistence line against Peking—is believed to have upset Moscow most of all.

Non-Communist observers were therefore amused to read Pravda's claim, straight faced, that "in the nature of socialism there are no antagonistic contradictions such as exist under the capitalist system." The Pravda article made no reference to recent unpleasant incidents on the frontier between Russia and Communist China.

AL MADE MILLIONS

It has been estimated the Chicago gangster Alphonse Capone made $105,000,000 in 1927.

We prove our cars the hard way to make them worry-free

We've taken our Datsun 1600s over some of the roughest roads and through the toughest rallies to prove a single point: that Datsun 1600s are more dependable than any other cars in their class.

Just for the record, Datsun has always had a fine reputation for reliability and performance. Datsun won the Canadian Rally Championship in 1967. Datsuns won two classes in the Shell 4000 Rally/68. And this year, Datsun 1600 won the South African Gold Fields Rally. It won team class honours in the rugged East Africa Safari Rally, where a field of 87 cars started and only 31 finished. Datsun 1600s came in 3rd, 5th, 7th, 8th, 11th, and 13th.

Datsun 1600s have real muscle. They're the most powerful imported cars in their class. Their advanced design overhead cam engines turn out 96 hp. They can go 0-60 in 13 seconds and up to 100 mph. And they can go up to 35 miles per gallon.

Mercedes-Benz, BMW and Datsun 1600 have a similar all-independent suspension system for precise handling and perfect control. There's a collapsible steering column, disc brakes, headrests, safety harnesses and padding inside. All standard equipment.

You don't have to race or rally a Datsun 1600 to enjoy it. You can take it easy with an all-synchro 4-on-the-floor or 3-speed automatic and stay cool with a "windows-up" fresh air ventilation system.

Test drive Datsun 1600 soon. There are more than 160 Datsun dealers coast-to-coast in Canada and over $1,000,000 in parts to back it wherever you go.

Placer gained 1 to 39; Bankeno, 75 cents to $9.00, and Denison, ½ to 58½.

McIntyre lost 2 to 134 and Pantino, ½ to 34.

British Petroleum was the most active issue on the American Stock Exchange, up 1¼ at 18⅝.

Brokers suggested this was because they were affected more directly than other sectors by an undercurrent of buyer caution.

The Toronto-Dominion Bank slid ⅞ to 21¼, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ⅛ to 21⅜ and Royal Bank ¼ to 22⅞, while Bank of Nova Scotia gained ⅜ to 24½. The Bank of Montreal was unchanged at 15⅛.

Among industrials, Credit Foncier advanced 1½ to 55. British Columbia Telephone ⅜ to 70½, Popular Industries ¾ to 9⅜, Simpsons ¾ to 39¾, Dominion Textile ⅝ to 17¾, and Rothmans ⅝ to 23½. Levy Industries slipped 1 point to 30 and Handy Andy ⅜ to 7.

AT LONDON renewed demand for British funds provided the feature of an otherwise quiet stock market today. Although sterling was down to around the support level of $2.3825 U.S., buyers moved in at the outset. Some profit-taking which followed was quickly absorbed and rises of up to ½ resulted.

Hawker rose 2s 9d to 53s 9d on the strength of its earnings report and Reyrolle gained ¼ to ½ on its contract with Ontario Hydro. Hudson's Bay continued firm.

Canadian Pacific and International Nickel added a point. Massey-Ferguson, Power Corp., and Alcan showed modest rises. Dome Exploration lost 5 points to 269.

AT VANCOUVER, gains and losses were evenly divided in the mining section today in trading of 3,200,000 shares to 11 a.m.

Ionarc Smelters was on the board for the first time and was in the $14 range in pre-noon trading. It traded 43,700.

Block Bros. added .75 at $25 and Auto Marine lost .50 at $6.50.

Gold, $ Reserves

Canada's reserve holdings of gold and United States dollars stood at $2.78 billion (U.S.) at April 30, up slightly from $2.77 billion at the end of March, the finance department said today.

In recent months, about 30 per cent of the total reserves has been made up of gold.

New Layer of Laws Due Soon Says IDA Chief

A central form of securities regulation in Canada is seen by an investment industry leader as a "short term" prospect.

Stanley E. Nixon, senior vice-president of Dominion Securities Corp. Ltd., Montreal, and president of Investment Dealers' Association of Canada, said operlapping jurisdictions in the control of securities legislation is likely to continue despite efforts to streamline the system.

Nixon arrived in Victoria Thursday for the IDA Pacific district annual meeting as part of a western tour and was to see the premier, securities commission and attorney-general before leaving today.

CANSEC DIM

In an interview Nixon noted provincial opposition to a proposed federal security authority because of a constitutional conflict having to do with property and civil rights, which are vested in the provinces.

But the alternative to this, as in the so-called CANSEC plan, would see representatives of the provinces and the federal government dealing on a continuing basis with securities matters, all from a central headquarters rather than by referring problems back to each respective capital.

Representatives would act much like delegates to a supranational body, but without full powers so as to preserve the constitution.

This plan also has its opponents and Nixon said the chances of CANSEC being realized are slight.

The third alternative would impose a third level of control on securities matters, much as the investment industry deplores such stratified regulation, as there is already provincial legislation and the self-administered policing of investment firms through the IDA.

Nixon said the federal government seems prepared to go ahead, confident that it has constitutional jurisdiction on securities matters spanning provincial and international boundaries.

But he would not forecast how soon the actual step would be taken.

Turning to inflation, a persistent topic during his tour, Nixon said Canada is in grave danger of toppling into a recession or depression unless policies of restraint can be maintained.

NEED GUTS

Acknowledging that Canadian and U.S. measures to restrain an overheated economy are running parallel—and must because of Canadian dependence on the U.S. economically—he speculated whether all levels of government have "the guts to keep up the restraint policy when the going gets rough." The current period is an interval before reaction sets in, he suggested.

Like Bank of Canada governor Louis Rasminsky, Nixon said it is a case of persisting with established policy, not introducing new ones, even when employment starts to rise, or other cooling factors start to occur.

A curb on speculation is also a weapon against inflation, Nixon said, suggesting control on credit such as bank loans made for speculative purchases.

But while the government must lead, there is a role to be played by the private sector as well. "We must rally a strong sense of social responsibility among those making public or private decisions which bear directly on the cost structure of our economy," he said.

Tax increases must halt, the rate of growth in the money supply curbed and spending reduced by the levels of government. Wage settlements must come down from "abnormal" levels, business must become more efficient, and perhaps accept temporarily lower profit margins.

"Short term sacrifices will be a small price to pay to protect the much greater long term interests all of us have in a non-inflationary prosperity," Nixon said.

Forest Industry Leaving Valley

VANCOUVER (CP) — Total sales value of forest products in British Columbia last year hit $1,400,000,000, J. V. Christensen, head of the B.C. Council of Forest Industries, said Thursday.

In his annual report, he said that due to a general recovery in the U.S. and European economies, overall B.C. pulp and paper production increased 11 per cent over 1967.

Better prices for wood products tended to offset the "still far too low" returns to the integrated forest products companies from pulp and paper sales.

The industry saw in 1968 the beginning of "an upslope move after some uncomfortable years in the profit valley," Christensen said, even though operating costs increased appreciably.

A wage settlement last June with the International Woodworkers of America on the coast was high and not accompanied by a corresponding incease in productivity.

Replying to recent criticism of high lumber costs, he said:

"I think it may be an unfortunate necessity that our industry must embark on an educational program to explain the inexorable law of supply and demand."

STABLE RETURNS

"The industry would prefer a fair and stable return rather than the cyclical peaks and valleys."

Recent first quarter reports by several forest companies which showed large increases in earnings over the 1968 first quarter has prompted the IWA to ask for a renegotiated contract with wages adjusted upwards.

An answer from Forest Industrial Relations, which bargains for the industry, is expected today.

Pulp capacity increased to 5,400,000 tons, up from 4,900,000 tons in 1967, while newsprint capacity was up 100,000 tons to 2,100,000.

Mr. Christensen said excess world production capacity, combined with shortfalls in demand, kept B.C. production to 82 per cent of newsprint production capacity.

WEST SPARKS LAKERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry West fired 39 points Thursday night as Los Angeles Lakers whipped Boston Celtics 117-104 to lead their best-of-seven National Basketball Association final 3-2.

Los Angeles trailed by a point at the end of the first quarter, but grabbed a 49-45 halftime advantage. The Lakers built that to 79-69 after three periods and West scored 16 in the final stanza.

West's running mate at guard, Johnny Egan, contributed 23 points to the Laker attack.

Sam Jones scored 25 for Boston and Larry Siegfried 20.

The series now moves to Boston for a Saturday afternoon game. If a seventh is needed, it will be played at the Lakers' Forum Monday night.

Wilson's No-Hitter Squares Accounts

By UP International

Don Wilson has extracted his pound of flesh.

The last time the 24-year-old right-hander started against Cincinnati, the Reds shelled him from the mound while breezing to a 14-0 victory. He left the baseball park that night a bitter man, not because of the rout but for what he thought to be unnecessary tactics used by the Reds to roll up the score.

He took his revenge Thursday night, pitching the second no-hitter of his career and duplicating a feat performed only the night before by the Reds' Jim Maloney as the Houston Astros downed Cincinatti 4-0.

"This no-hitter gave me much more personal satisfaction than the other one," said Wilson, referring to a similar victory over Atlanta on June 18, 1967.

"Why? Remember the last time I faced them? Remember Pete Rose taking an extra base when they had a big lead? Remember Johnny Bench calling for breaking balls when their pitcher was behind the batter in the ninth? I just don't think it's right that a club should try to embarrass another like that in front of their home fans."

Wilson admitted there's no love lost between the Reds and him. "I know they don't like me and I don't like them. But then, again, this isn't a popularity contest."

Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles blanked San Francisco 5-0, St. Louis ripped Pittsburgh 9-3, San Diego edged Atlanta 4-3 and Montreal nipped New York 3-2 in the only scheduled games.

In American League play, Cleveland downed New York 6-2, Minnesota beat Seattle 4-1, Kansas City squeezed by Chicago 5-4 in 12 innings, Washington edged Boston 7-6, Detroit blanked Baltimore 2-0 and California topped Oakland 3-2 in 10 innings.

Only 4,042 Fans Enjoyed Treat

The Astros were held hitless by Jim Merritt until the fourth when Doug Rader led off with a home run. They added two more runs in the fifth on a walk, Jim Wynn's single and Denis Menke's double. Curt Blefary tripled and scored on Wilson's sacrifice fly in the eighth for Houston's final run.

A crowd of only 4,042 watched as no-hitters were pitched in consecutive games in the same park for only the second time in baseball history. Last September, Gaylord Perry of San Francisco and Ray Washburn of St. Louis traded no-hitters in Candlestick Park.

The victory was Houston's first in nine games and first after 13 consecutive road losses.

Don Sutton almost joined the no-hit parade, coming within one hit as the Dodgers beat the Giants to tie them for first in the western divisions. Sutton allowed only an eighth-inning double to Jim Davenport in halting a nine-game Giant run.

Cowan Losses To Collegian

PINEHURST, N.C. (CP) — Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., bowed out of the North and South Amateur golf tournament Thursday, falling 2 and 1 before Lanny Wadkins of Wake Forest University.

Cowan, former U.S. and Canadian Amateur champion, thus missed a semi-final berth in one of North America's host prestigous amateur golf events.

Semi-finalists, besides Wadkins, are Joe Inman, also of Wake Forest, Bob Lowry of Huntsville, Ala., and Peter Green of Franklin, Mich.

Wadkins, a 19-year-old freshman, shot about one under par for his victory. He meets Lowry in one semi. Inman and Green meet in the other.

Duff a Playoff Dandy With Goals and Words

Blues Face Elimination As Vachon Posts Shutout

ST. LOUIS (CP) — Left winger Dick Duff helped make good his prediction Thursday night as his Montreal Canadiens defeated St. Louis Blues 4-0 in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Duff scored two goals and assisted on another by defenceman Serge Savard to lead Montreal to their third win of the best-of-seven final, one victory from snatching the cup for the fourth time in the last five years.

Duff had said before the game his club needed "four or five goals to psyche them out."

"We didn't prove anything in the first two games and everyone was still talking about how we only beat them by one goal each game last year," Duff said after the game in the Canadiens' dressing room.

"Now they know we're more than a goal better than they are."

BLOCKS 29 SHOTS

The Blues face elimination Sunday afternoon in what appears to be another four-game sweep for the Canadiens, who hold a 15-0-2 record in games with St. Louis since the Blues joined the National Hockey League two years ago.

Jacques Lemaire scored the other Montreal goal and Rogatien Vachon picked up his first shutout in 17 playoff appearances by blocking 29 shots.

It was the worst defeat for the Blues in six regular-season and three Stanley Cup games with the Canadiens this year and it came before 16,338 screaming fans—the most ever to attend a game at the Arena.

John Beliveau, who missed most of the final last year with a knee injury, picked up two assists to bring his career playoff point total to 154, two less than all-time leader Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings. Beliveau has 73 goals and 81 assists.

GOAL CALLED BACK

The Blues appeared disheartened when a goal by Frank St. Marseille was called back at 2:49 of the first period. Referee John Ashley ruled the 29-year-old centre had kicked the puck between Vachon's pads.

Jacques Plante, who shares the record of the 13 playoff shutouts with Turk Broda, formerly with Toronto Maple Leafs, looked bad on Savard's goal at 12:34 of the first period. But the former Canadiens' star couldn't be faulted the rest of the way—the Blues were simply overpowered.

The fans had a chance to see what Red Berenson of the Blues calls Montreal's "$1,000,000 bench." When right-winger Claude Provost suffered a shoulder separation in a collision with Jean-Guy Talbot, Christian Bordeleau, who played centre for Houston Appollos of the Central Hockey League all season, took his place on a line with Ralph Backstrom and John Ferguson. Some observers didn't realize Provost was missing until the start of the final period.

Duff had a field day in front of the St. Louis net and almost had another goal when the second period was only 24 seconds old, but his shot bounced off the crossbar behind Plante.

Even Ruel Edgy

ST. LOUIS (CP)—Winning or losing made little difference Thursday night—neither coach wanted to talk . . . at first.

Coach Claude Ruel, after watching his Montreal Canadiens skate to a 4-0 win over St. Louis Blues Thursday night and a 3-0 stranglehold going into Sunday's fourth game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final, was caught off stride seconds after he charged into the Montreal dressing room to congratulate his players.

"It was really all over before it started, wasn't it?" a reporter asked Ruel, referring to the one-sided score.

Ruel, speechless for a moment, said: "That's a stupid question and a stupid thing to say."

The questioner hastened to say the remark was facetious.

It took Ruel about 10 minutes to regain his composure. When he did, all he said was that his club has played well.

"My boys work hard and I work hard to win. They worked hard tonight and played well and we won."

SCOTTY BOTHERED

In the Blues' dressing room, Coach Scotty Bowman was equally worked up.

"I'm not answering any questions tonight so don't ask any," Bowman said.

However, he later relented and said that Frank St. Marseille had not kicked the puck into the net early in the first period.

The red light went on behind Montreal goalie Rogatien Vachon to indicate a goal, but referee John Ashley ruled the St. Louis player had kicked the puck and no goal was allowed.

"He (St. Marseille) said he didn't kick it," Bowman said. "He said it hit his skate when he was skating."

Vachon, who registered his first National Hockey League playoff shutout, didn't agree with Bowman.

"St. Marseille just kicked the puck in with his foot as he skated right through the crease," Vachon said.

CHECKED CLOSELY

Dick Duff, who scored two of Montreal's goals, said his club has to work just as hard to stay up for games against St. Louis as it did for Boston Bruins, eliminated by Montreal in six games in the Stanley Cup semi-final.

"When you're a couple of games up it's easy to relax and then twice as hard to get back in stride," Duff said.

Captain Jean Beliveau observed that the Canadiens gave the Blues little chance to organize.

"We were skating on top of them and just didn't let them get started," Beliveau said.

"Montreal checked pretty well in the first 10 minutes," Bowman agreed. "It was a little different with them because they could afford to gamble and they moved everybody inside our blueline and dared us to get out."

The only casualty of the game was Montreal's Claude Provost. The veteran right winger suffered a separation in his right shoulder after a first-period collision.

BETTER DEAL FOR FANS AT ANNUAL TRACK MEET

Spectators, often unable to follow all that is going on at track meets, should get a better deal June 21 at Centennial Stadium.

That's the date of the annual Times-Y international track and field meet and organizers announced today that they are planning to make it a spectators' meet. They are working out ways to give fans better views of field events while providing up-to-the-minute reports and comments on all contests.

Organizers of the meet, sponsored jointly by the Victoria YM-YWCA and the Victoria Daily Times, expect to present several world-class athletes along with a large number of stars from clubs in the Pacific Northwest.

Forum Timepiece Suffered Lapses

MONTREAL (CP) — A police officer testified at the preliminary hearing of four men on lottery charges Thursday that the Forum clock did not function properly during some National Hockey League games.

Lieut. Steve Olynyk of the social service squad said he and other officers had attended two NHL games and one exhibition game, all in January. During the exhibition game the clock stopped one second late for one goal.

But during the NHL games, "the time lapse was as much as five seconds," he said.

Lieut. Olynyk said that in all three games, Andre Dandurand had been the timekeeper.

Dandurand, 34, of suburban Anjoy, is one of the four accused. Others are Jean-Guy Doiron, 38, of Anjoy; Henri Labelle, 34, of suburban Verdun, and Gilles Bacon, 34, of suburban Brossard.

ILLEGAL INTERFERENCE

Dandurand is charged with having conspired with Doiron and others to interfere illegally with the normal operation of the Forum clock, with accepting $12,500 to interfere illegally with the operation of the clock and with conspiring to operate an illegal lottery.

Labelle and Bacon face charges of conspiring to operate an illegal lottery.

Doiron faces charges of conspiring to operate a lottery, conspiring with Dandurand to interfere illegally with the official clock and with giving Dandurand $12,500 to induce the latter to interfere with the clock.

Police said the lottery scheme involved the sale of tickets based on the time of goals scored during NHL games here.

Books of tickets were coded so selected agents selling the tickets would know at what time intervals in a game even-numbered seconds could win and odd-numbered seconds could lose.

The agents would sell losing tickets to the public and retain tickets that might win. The code changed weekly.

Youth Bolsters Rocks

Younger legs equal speed.

Such is the philosophy behind the fact that half of the players in Victoria Shamrocks' three-line offensive force are recently elevated juniors.

Rocks begin their campaign this Saturday with a pre-season exhibition contest against New Westminster Salmonbellies in Surrey, part of the Greenwood Tournament during which each squad in the Western Lacrosse Association plays three exhibition games.

Proceeds from these games go to the promotion of minor lacrosse throughout the province.

Seventeen players will start with the Shamrocks Saturday night.

The first line will consist only of returning players Don McNeil, Ken Alexander and Nirmal Dillon. In the second line ex-junior Mike Beaulac will be backed by the experience of Charly Hardy and Charn Dhillon.

ROOKIE LINE

Players who were juniors last season will entirely make up the third line where brothers Dennis and Tom Somner will be joined by Murray "Whity" Murault.

But coach Tom Druce will rely only on seniors for the all-important defensive positions.

Team-leading scorer last season, Ranjit Dillon, will be joined by Tom Churchill, Martin Bellwood and John Hansen.

Starting goalie will be Doug Thompson with ex-junior Dave Wirtanen as back-up man.

Owen Richmond and Mel Galloway, who recently moved to Victoria from Kamloops, are utility players.

Shamrocks return to Memorial Arena for the first time on May 14 for an exhibition against Salmonbellies.

First home game of the regular season is one May 28 against Coquitlam Adanacs.

BAEZA REPLACES SHOEMAKER . . . . . . IN RUN FOR ROSES

Kentucky Derby Field Small But Select

The Washington Post

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A field of eight, the smallest since 1948, Citation's year, was entered at Churchill Downs Thursday morning for Saturday's 95th running of the $155,700 Kentucky Derby.

Braulio Baeza was named to replace the injured Willie Shoemaker on Arts and Letters and the unbeaten Majestic Prince was installed a 6-to-5 favorite over the 9-to-5 Top Knight.

This derby is assured a prominent place in racing history as President Nixon is scheduled to be the first chief executive to attend while serving in office.

Arts and Letters and Dike, both 5-to-1, are the main rivals to the top two 3-year-olds which give this renewal of America's greatest horserace strong inter-sectional overtones.

Canadian-owned Majestic Prince is the pride of the West. Six of the Kentucky-bred's seven successes having occurred in California, including the Santa Anita Derby. Top Knight decimated his opposition in the Flamingo Stakes and Florida Derby.

Majestic Prince, owned by Canadian Frank McMahon, was impressive here last Saturday in capturing the seven furlong Stepping Stone purse in 1.21 3-5, a fifth of a second off the track record. Top Knight, representing the estate of Steven B. Wilson, comes into the contest without a race in 34 days.

Completing the line-up for the "mile and a quarter without any water" are Fleet Allied, Traffic Mark, Rae Jet and Ocean Road. Traffic Mark may be scratched. This is a half-and-half field. The four leading horses have established outstanding form and are considered to be the best derby grouping since Iron Liege, Gallant Man, Round Table and Bold Ruler finished in that order in 1957.

Many West Coast patriots contend Majestic Prince, purchased as a yearling for a then-record $250,000 will be the ninth triple crown winner. Citation was the most recent.

A prize of $113,200, a prominent place in the turf's record books and a chance at stud as a syndicated stallion are among the spoils awaiting the winner. There is a possibility President Nixon will take part in the trophy presentation.

Post time is 2:30 PDT. The race will be telecast by the CBS and CBC networks.

Shoemaker, who has been astride three derby winners, suffered a fractured pelvis Wednesday in a freak paddock accident at Hollywood Park.

"It's a trough break, for him and for us," remarked Rokeby trainer Elliott Burch. "I picked Baeza because he's the best available. He can do anything with a horse." Baeza rode Chateaugay to victory in the 1963 derby.

Bill Hartack, possessor of the best Derby record compiled by a jockey — four triumphs in eight attempts — will ride Majestic Prince.

The starting field, showing post position, rider and probable odds:

1—Top Knight (Ycaza) 9-5.
2—Traffic Mark (Grimm) 30-1.
3—Arts and Letters (Baeza) 5-1.
4—Rae Jet (Howard) 50-1.
5—Fleet Allied (Hall) 50-1.
6—Ocean Roar (Stewart) 30-1.
7—Dike (Velasquez) 5-1.
8—Majestic Prince (Hartack) 6-5.

Elder, Zarley Open Strongly

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lee Elder wielded a blazing hot putter and Kermit Zarley snapped a season-long slump for six-under-par 66s Thursday and a share of the first-round lead in the $100,000 Greater New Orleans open golf tournament.

Their lead was shaky, however. The field of 144 took advantage of near perfect golfing weather to give par a beating on the sprawling 7,090-yard, par-72 Lakewood Country Club course.

Just one stroke back was a group of eight, including a couple of dangerous tour veterans, Frank Beard, celebrating his 30th birthday, and Dan Sikes.

And 13 others had 68s, four-under par and two strokes off the pace. That made a total of 23 players at four-under or better.

Al Balding of Toronto shot a 72, Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg had a 73 and Ken Fulton of Trail, B.C. a 74.

Over half the field was par or better. It appeared that it might take a sub-par score to make the cut when the field is trimmed to the low 70 and ties after today's second round.

BORROWED PUTTER

Elder, who arrived from an exhibition in Brazil minus a putter, had to borrow one from Dom Mirandi, PGA official scorekeeper. He may never give it back. The 33-year-old Elder used only 23 putts and had a remarkable 11 one-putt greens.

"I didn't think I would play this well," Elder said. "I was 19 hours on the plane from Brazil. It was an exceptional putting round, one of the best I've had all year."

Zarley also had seven birdies and went one over par on one hole. He closed with birdies on four of the last six holes, all on reasonably short putts.

Billy Casper, one of the pre-tourney favorites, complained that an insecticide sprayed on the course was affecting his allergies, and shot a 71.

Jack Nicklaus struggled to a 74.

Baseball Openers Saturday

Baseball played in a vacant lot without the identification given by a common uniform—such are the memories of yesteryear.

Some memories of the latter should come to life Saturday as the Senior Amateur Baseball League returns for the 1969 season-opener at 2 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

Gorge Hotel (nee Ingraham Hotel) and Independents, the reigning playoff champions, clash in the first game but appearances might take any form.

League-president Don Jessop, uncertain what the teams will look like, stated:

"We haven't got our shipment of uniforms here yet and the sporting goods store doesn't expect them now until the end of next week. I guess we'll have to look like a bunch of rag tags for a while."

But the calibre of play is likely to be anything but "rag tag."

Defending champion Transport Workers are reported to be the team to beat within the five-squad league, based this season at Athletic Park.

LAKERS BUILDING

Independents, Gorge and Greaves Moving and Storage, the other Victoria-based entries are expected to put up a stiff struggle for the league pennant, with Cowichan Lakers, the other entry, still in the building process.

Transports, who face Lakers on Sunday with a doubleheader at 1 and 3 p.m., have Barry Harvey returning to a managerial position after a one-season absence. He replaced Mike McAvoy, who remains as all-star catcher.

Barry Cosier returns as the guiding light for Independents and is expected to work on a double-play combination around second base with Ken Hawkins.

Bob Lumley, rookie manager of Gorge, is still awaiting the return of many university students to the team and so anticipates a slow start.

Veteran Gerry Parker again manages Greaves with most of the squad returning to the fold.

Continual rain during recent weeks has stalled the plans of Cowichan manager Ron Saysell, who believes his team is stronger than ever with several hold-overs ready to take on more active roles.

Each team in the league will play a 32-game schedule before playoffs begin.

MacKay to Miss O'Keefe's Match

Victoria O'Keefes will be missing the services of leading scorer Ike MacKay when the Pacific Coast League team takes on Canadian Scottish of the Victoria and District League at 8 p.m. Saturday in Royal Athletic Park.

MacKay suffered a badly-bruised ankle in last weekend's exhibition against Vancouver Spartans. He is expected to be ready for the exhibition game O'Keefes have with West Bromwich Albion of the English League's first division on May 14.

BUSY WEEKEND is in store for Cedar Hill's Bob Herbertson (above), defending champion in two golf tournaments. He'll defend low gross trophy in Victoria Machinery Depot's annual tournament on Saturday and Hugh Francis trophy in Sunday's Times Island Open handicap final at Uplands. Facing Herbertson in 36-hole playoff at Uplands will be former hockey player Bill Shvetz.

Cowichan Duo Hard-Pressed

Lee Budden and Olive Holman, of the Cowichan Golf Club, had a difficult time Thursday at Uplands before advancing to today's final of the Victoria and District women's two-ball championship at Royal Colwood.

The Cowichan combination, tournament medallists, had to go to the 18th hole before downing Kay Tribe and June Lovitt of Uplands, 2-up, in the semi-final rounds.

Today they were to meet Gorge Vale's Elsie Saunders and Ivy Blunt for the title.

Gorge Vale's finalists carded a 7 and 6 win over Margaret Todd and Phyllis Mearns of Victoria.

Galt Crew One Away From Seniors' Sweep

GALT, Ont. (CP) — Galt Hornets skated to a 4-1 win over Calgary Stampeders Thursday night to move to within one game of capturing this city's second Allan Cup hockey title in nine years.

The win gave Galt a 3-0 lead in the Canadian senior championships with the fourth game in the best-of-seven round set for Saturday night. All games are being played in Galt.

Galt coach Bill Wylie was critical of his team's effort despite the victory.

"We gave the puck away more than usual and we couldn't move the puck out of our own end. We don't look hungry."

NOT SHARP

Wylie said the Hornets have not played as well against Calgary as they did in the Eastern Canada final against Victoriaville Tigers, defending national champions.

Roy Kelly, the Calgary coach, declined to comment.

Defenceman Ron Hergott, Howie Dietrich, Corby Adams and Fern Belanger scored for Hornets. Ted Demchuk, with his third goal of the series, replied for the Stampeders.

Jim Letcher, 27, playing his first complete game in the Calgary nets in nearly five weeks, blocked 32 Galt shots, including several from close range.

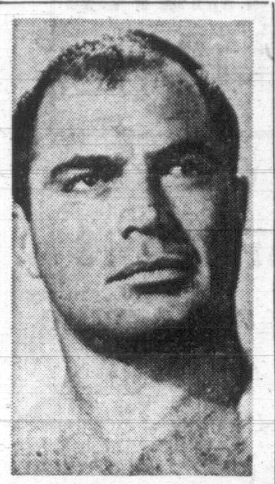
Eagles' Sale Tied to String



SHARING SPOTLIGHT on professional wrestling program Saturday night at Memorial Arena will be John Tolos (above), who is slated to partner John Kostas in tag-team match against Dutch Savage and Bulldog Brown. Three other bouts are also on card, which starts at 8:15.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles, of the National Football League, were sold Thursday night with one string attached to the $16,055,000 deal.

The ownership of the club was turned over by financially-pressed Jerry Wolman to Leonard Tose, Norristown, Pa., trucking magnate. Wolman paid $5,505,000 for the team in 1964.

The one string is the private agreement between Tose and Wolman that if Wolman can raise the $16,055,000 by Aug. 1, he can repurchase the team. In the interim, Tose is expected to completely revamp the club from general manager and coach down to the lowest executive.

Tose is expected to fire general manager-coach Joe Kuharich, buying up the last 11 years of Kuharich's 15-year contract valued at an estimated $50,000 a year. The new owner then is believed ready to name Pete Retzlaff, one-time all-pro end of the Eagles, as the new general manager.

STAMPS LOSING?

Retzlaff, 37, presently a television sportscaster here, reportedly will select Jerry Williams, former NFL player and assistant coach, as the new Eagles' field boss. Williams is under a four-year contract to Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian Football League, where he was named coach of the year in 1967.

Williams' staff, already in the making, probably will include Charey Gauer, offensive coach of the cub when it won the NFL ltitle in 1960 by beating Green Bay. Another former Eagle, now playing in the league, who at this time cannot be identified, also is in line for an assistant's job.

In Calgary, Williams declared today he "has been happy" as head coach of the Stampeders "and is not looking for any job in the NFL."

"Retzlaff and I are close friends," Williams said. "That is undoubtedly why there is this speculation in Philadelphia.

"But I haven't talked to Pete lately and I don't think he is general manager as of now. There is no way that I would contact the Eagles. I have been very happy here over the years."

Merger Problem Still a Struggle

NEW YORK (AP) — The pro football realignment for 1970 still was undecided Thursday but a projected schedule would call for 52 to 59 games between teams now operating in separate leagues.

The owners still were struggling to resolve their merger problems on the basis of three teams now playing in the National Football League joining the 10 current American Football League teams in one conference of the new merged league.

Cleveland owner Art Modell, head of the NFL's realignment committee, pared the possibilities by saying he didn't think it would be in either league's interest to "emasculate the key-note franchises."

He listed his own Browns, Los Angeles and Chicago as three teams in that category. New York and San Francisco also are in the won't-be-moved class because of scheduling and television arrangements.

"There are seven or eight likely teams that are good prospects for moving," Modell estimated.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle has been having private sessions with several NFL owners but said he had found no acceptance or rejection but only "a willingness to explore."

"If I think the owners are close enough to a solution I will keep them at it all weekend," he said. "If it appears it would be better to recess and come back in a couple of weeks, we'll do that. I want to resolve this as soon as possible."

MAJOR LOOP OPENS SEASON ON SUNDAY

Two games highlight season-opening activities Sunday for the Victoria Major Men's Softball League in Central Park.

Molsons are slated to take on Bate Construction at 2:30 p.m., with Red Lion Inn tackling Langford Drywall at 6:30.

Single games will continue during weekdays at 6:45 each night, excluding Wednesdays.

Kershaw Returns To Racing

Garry Kershaw has decided to move out of the stands and back to the track at Western Speedway on Saturday night.

After winning just about everything in sight last season the stock car division, Kershaw announced his retirement earlier this year.

He will return to make his debut in the super-stock section of a combined program with stockers which starts with time trials at 7 p.m.

Kershaw will pilot a new car, built to specifications on a '55 "Chevy" chassis and powered by a 350-cubic-inch engine.

Competing against Kershaw will be some old rivals from last season that have also stepped up into super-stock ranks. They include Larry Walker, Rick O'Dell, Neil Montgomery, Wayne Atkinson and John Harris.

New 'Citizens of Seas' Group

In North America, the most universally-flown yachtsman's flag is probably the red maple leaf centred on a background of nine vertical blue and white stripes.

Hewett

Power Squadron members number in the thousands, and are found at inland boating centres such as Calgary, as well as coastal areas from Nanaimo to Nantucket.

Power Squadron's Primary purpose is to train boaters to become responsible "citizens of the sea," with a knowledge of seamanship, safety procedures, and basic piloting. Those who graduate from the training program can then join the Power Squadron unit in their district. And that is the "open sesame" to membership; the only way.

Late spring always brings several highlights for Victoria members. And this year, there is the added excitement of the formation of another group in this area.

The "Saanich Peninsula Power Squadron" has officially applied for a warrant, and will receive its charter in June when Chief Commander Howard S. Reese of the Canadian Power Squadrons makes a western visit. Officers elect for the new squadron are Nelson Dewey, squadron commander; Clifford Clive, executive officer; Bill Glanfield, secretary; and Gordon McCleary, treasurer. The Sidney-based group will develop its own training program, assisted by personnel from Victoria Squadron.

At Tuesday's annual general meeting, a new slate of officers was elected for Victoria Squadron. They include Ted Westover, squadron commander; Tom Dalzell, executive officer; Les Hale, training officer; Gordon Christian, treasurer; Bob Jeacock, secretary, and Al Price, first lieutenant.

While "social" functions are not featured in the Power Squadron calendar, there is always a capacity crowd for the annual graduation banquet and presentation of certificates, which this year will be held on Tuesday, May 13th, at the Empress Hotel.

One of the "big" weekends events is scheduled for June 7, 8—the annual district "cruise and get together" at Manana Lodge, where the sailpast ceremonies will take place. Chief Commander Howard S. Rees will be in attendance for the occasion.

Namath Fined For Speeding

MIAMI (AP) — Football player Joe Namath was found innocent today of drunken driving but the New York Jets quarterback was fined $50 for speeding in an April 14 incident in which he admitted cursing a police officer.

A Dade County judge said Namath submitted to a chemical test shortly after his arrest on a causeway between Miami and Miami Beach and results showed he was sober according to the law.

Flanked by his lawyer and reporters, Namath stood with head down as the judge levied the $50 fine or four-day jail sentence on the speeding charge.

"I got a fair shake," Namath said as he walked across the hall and paid his fine. "I wasn't drunk but I might have been speeding."

The British Columbia group of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association will hold its annual convention in Victoria Saturday and Sunday.

Officers for the coming year will be elected.

Provincial president Frank Porter said today that delegates from Victoria, up-Island, the lower mainland, Washington and California will be hosted at a cocktail party and dance Saturday.

The event will be held in the 800 Wing's headquarters on Wilson Street.

Balloons, Bands Mark Maiden Sailing of New Queen

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) — Britain's new-look liner, Queen Elizabeth 2, sailed on her maiden voyage to New York today—15 minutes late.

Bands blared patriotic tunes, planes flew overhead in salute and hundreds of rain-drenched spectators shouted "Good luck" as the trouble-plagued liner began moving from Southampton into a gale in the English Channel.

More than 1,000 balloons were released from the quayside as the $72,000,000 ship edged stern first from Southampton's Ocean Terminal.

QE2's departure for New York made an emotional climax to more than six years of planning and work—efforts that at times seemed doomed to failure.

The ship came under an unprecedented barrage of criticism after her engines broke down on a shakedown cruise to the Canary Islands at the start of the year.

Cunard Steam-Ship Co. refused to accept the ship from her Scottish builders—but now, after lengthy repairs, the shipping line says all her troubles are over.

"This is the finest ship in the world," said Sir Basil Smallpeice, Cunard chairman.

QE2—a floating resort with discotheques for teen-agers and gracious lounges for older folk—carries Cunard's hopes for ushering in a new style of ocean travel to compete with the airlines.

He Paved Way for Hitler

OBERSASBACH (AP) — Former chancellor Franz von Papen, who helped pave Hitler's way to power in Germany and later won acquittal at the Nuernberg war crimes trials, died today, his son reported.

Von Papen, 89, became seriously ill early in April. His son said the illness was aggravated by his advanced age. He died at his secluded home in this Baden village.

Von Papen, regarded as something of a lightweight in the German politics of the early 1930s, was as responsible as any one man for bringing Adolf Hitler to power, though that probably was not what he meant to do.

In a chaotic political situation in June, 1932, President Paul von Hindenburg appointed Von Papen chancellor. But he resigned that fall after elections showed Hitler's Nazis had made great gains, though still not enough for a Reichstag majority.

The Nazis were nearly bankrupt then, and Von Papen arranged a meeting of Hitler and Baron Kurt von Schroeder, a Cologne banker, apparently with the idea of putting Hitler and the Nazis in his debt. He persuaded Schroeder and his colleagues that the country's best hope was a coalition government of Nazis and nationalist rightists. In a short time a fund of 4,000,000 marks was raised for Hitler's party.

DESIGNED AS CHECK

Von Papen then went to his old friend, President Hindenburg and convinced him that he should summon Hitler to be chancellor and make Von Papen his deputy. Hitler and two others were the only Nazis in the government formed Jan. 30, 1933, and Von Papen said it was deliberately fashioned that way to keep Hitler in check.

But Von Papen, the record shows, sat in cabinet meetings at which the Nazis gradually substituted the concentration camp for the rule of law.

Five Stand Trial

EDMONTON (CP)—Five men, including Brian Doleson, 18, and Ronald Simpson, 23, both of Burnaby, Thursday were ordered to stand trial on charges of possession of marijuana for trafficking. Three others, Donald McKay, 19; Oswald Gambin, 26, and Michael Timisky, 18, were from Edmonton. Gambin faces an additional charge of possession of LSD for trafficking and will appear for a preliminary hearing June 13.

PILLOW CONCERT

What Can the Matter Be If Poppies Really Pop?

By PETER LAWSON

Poppies and pillows will dominate tonight at Oak Bay High School.

Beginning at 8:30 Oak Bay Youth Council is presenting another pillow concert featuring the Poppy Family, Vancouver's answer to the Rolling Stones.

Admission is restricted to high school students presenting their student cards, at $1.50 each.

The Poppy Family has become the most controversial group in the northwest.

What Can the Matter Be?, the title of the band's latest single seems to be an appropriate question posed by members of the Family. The song was written by Terry Jacks of the Poppy Family and contains comments about race, pollution, freedom and pot.

Formerly under some type of ban on local radio stations, What Can the Matter Be? is a good example of what young people consider to be the real problems of our times.

Vancouver radio stations at first announced it as a song the other radio stations are refusing to play, but as disc-jockeys grew accustomed to the lyrics it was heard more frequently.

Tom Peacock of CKWX first made a decision not to play it, his reason being "it comes out as advocating the use of pot, and it's my decision not to play it." On the same note, Cameron Bell, a former disc-jockey and now news director for television station CHAN has arranged for a color Newshour film to be made and shown, with the song as its theme on the national CTV net.

●

Tonight at St. Christopher's Hall, corner of Carey and Tillicum, there is a dance with the Blue Requiem, starting at 8:30.

●

If you can make it to Aldergrove on the 17th, 18th and 19th of this month to take in the festivities there, do so.

Some 25 rock bands are joining forces for a huge jam session in the open fields outside of the city. There will be stalls and tents set up, selling and distributing nearly all types of wares and elothing. The three-day festival is being organized by mainland promoters and there is a good chance local talent will travel with their equipment to the forrests surrounding the town.

●

SPECTRA, the group that ran all the light shows at the Nine in the Fifth Place, is featured at a dance presented by the Blue Ruum at Fraser Street Hall next Friday night. There will be four continuous hours of music beginning at 8:30. Admission is $1.

While Messer Doesn't Fiddle, MPs Do Slow Burn

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Don Messer seems to be in the Commons more often than cabinet ministers these days.

He's not there personally, but as a subject for discussion he's running second only to NATO and western agriculture problems.

And despite the fact that State Secretary Gerard Pelletier told the Commons Thursday the CBC intends to stand by its decision to cancel the Don Messer show from national television, there is no indication that MPs are prepared to cancel it.

"No, sir," says Robert McCleave (PC — Halifax-East Hants), when asked in an interview whether he would ease up on his save-Messer campaign. "This fight will continue."

Mr. Cleave has become the focal point for the Messer supporters across Canada, because he raised the issue in the Commons when it was merely a rumor that the CBC intended to cancel the weekly half-hour oldtime fiddling show from Halifax.

"I can sense the flap of the wings of the culture vultures in Toronto and I want to drive them back to their roost before they do in a very fine piece of entertainment," he said.

So far, the "culture vultures" haven't returned to their roost, but this isn't because Mr. McCleave isn't trying. Scarcely a day goes by without him badgering someone on the government side about the Messer show. And lately, he's been getting some high-powered assistance.

THE PHANTOM'S 2-1 IN ATLANTIC STAKES

LONDON (AP) — London bookmakers today made Britain's Royal Navy Phantom jets solid favorites to win the Daily Mail transatlantic air race which starts Sunday.

Odds from the bookies were 2-1 on. That means you bet £2 (about $5.20) to win £1 ($2.60) if you think the navy's three supersonic Phantoms will be fastest between the centre of New York and the centre of London.

The 400 competitors trying for a share of the £60,000 ($156,000) prize money have to get from the top of the General Post Office Tower in London to the top of the Empire State Building in New York or vice versa.

There are 21 categories in all. Whether competitors start from New York or from London, their chances of a prize in the appropriate category are the same. The contestants plan to use planes ranging from the supersonics to 80-m.p.h. light planes weighing less than 5,000 pounds.

Some competitors are travelling by regular airliner. Others are going in executive jets.

SPEED NOT ESSENTIAL

Prizes will go to the most meritorious (not just the fastest) performances by Britons, Americans and Commonwealth citizens.

Special prizes will go also to the fastest Swiss.

The race is being held to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic by Capt. John Alcock and Lieut. Arthur Brown from Newfoundland to Ireland.

First competitor to take off is to be Anne Alcock, niece of Capt. Alcock.

Another Alcock and Brown are entered but they are not related to the pioneering flyers.

Charles B. Alcock, a native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., now living in Sudbury, Ont., and Fred Brown of Toronto plan to make the trip by commercial airline, with the flight taking about 6½ hours.

Motorcycles are strongly favored to get competitors to and from their transatlantic aircraft. Helicopters, too, are much in evidence.

SOME USE SPEEDBOATS

Other contestants are plumping for speedboats to take them up or down the Thames at London to their chosen airfields.

Just for the fun of it, some contestants are using stage coaches, vintage cars, bicycles and even a rickshaw.

The No. 10 Experimental Squadron at Canadian Forces Base Shearwater, near Halifax, had planned to enter but withdrew its entry before the deadline.

The squadron was planning to enter a helicopter, which would have required refueling from two destroyers between Goose Bay, Nfld., and Lossiemouth on the northeast cost of Scotland.

A Canadian forces spokesman said the flight could not be approved because operational commitments prevented the placing of the destroyers along the route.

Top Teachers Leaving Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — After 22 months of fruitless contract negotiations, many of the best qualified and most experienced of Quebec's teachers are looking for jobs in other provinces.

"I know a great many who are leaving, and many more still on the fence," Dr. Allana Reid-Smith, president of the 6,000-member Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, said in an interview.

"But the numbers don't worry me—it's the calibre. In all cases it's the people who aren't afraid to try something new, the people with courage and sense of adventure.

"These are the people we need most to build up our own system."

Donald Peacock, head of the Montreal Teachers Association, representing about 2,700 Montreal-area Protestant teachers, said the number of resignations in the Protestant system this year is about 500—"more or less the same" as in any other year.

"But, he added, "there is a qualitative difference. The number of better qualified, senior, high school teachers has gone up. They are moving to Ontario and other provinces.

He added, however, that if a satisfactory settlement is not reached before May 31, the over-all number of resignations would also increase.

Either way the quality of teaching will go down, he said.

MAY STATE POSITIONS

In the national assembly Thursday night there was unanimous agreement to have representatives of the parties involved in the contract dispute state their positions to the assembly's executive council committee.

Spokesmen for the 70,000 teachers, the school boards and the Quebec government are scheduled to meet with the committee next Tuesday.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said it was the assembly's duty to have the three groups explain themselves.

However, Protestant teachers have reached a separate agreement with their board, and Montreal's English-speaking Catholic teachers have said they will accept their contract with the salary modifications already satisfactorily negotiated.

The government, on the other hand, has refused to consider regional settlements.

The situation has led to stalemate, a series of rotating strikes in January and unsuccessful mediation under Judge Rene Lippe in February. Recently, various teacher groups have held a series of one-day warning strikes.

The 60,000-member Quebec Teachers Corporation, representing most of the province's French-speaking Catholic teachers, has said that 40 to 75 per cent of its membership will resign if a settlement is not reached before May 31, the date when teachers must tender resignations or be bound to another year.

Water Men Meeting At Empress

More than 600 members of the American Water Works Association from the Pacific Northwest are in Victoria for their 42nd annual convention.

The business aspects of the water utilities are under discussion at the three-day convention in the Empress.

A film, Action on The Columbia, and a talk on the role of the U.S. Water Pollution Control Administration were among the highlights of today's session.

After a tour of the Greater Victoria Water District this afternoon, the convention was to end with a banquet in the Empress Ballroom.

Chinese May Re-Establish International Envoys

HONG KONG (Reuters) — The May Day activities of Chairman Mao Tse-tung hint that China may soon send its ambassadors back to foreign capitals, observers said here today.

The New China news agency reported today that Mao, in May Day celebrations in Peking Thursday night, received eight new foreign ambassadors to China and their wives.

This is believed to be the first time for many months Mao has personally received envoys. It could be the first step in the return of ambassadors to foreign capitals from which they were summoned to Peking during the Cultural Revolution in 1967, observers said.

Heading the list of ambassadors received by Mao and Vice-Chairman Lin Piao was the new Albanian ambassador, Xhorxhi Robo, and his wife.

Before the Magistrate

A youth who ran from police, was knocked down by a car and later jumped a high fence while a detective fired a warning shot was convicted Thursday of obtaining food and lodgings by fraud.

Carlos M. Neives, 20, an American, had pleaded not guilty in central court. He was remanded to May 9 for sentence.

Det. Lorne Johnson said after the youth's arrest he ran from the police car and was hit by a car on Herald Street. He got up, ran through a service station and climbed a 15 to 20-foot fence.

Johnson said he lost Nieves after firing the shot. He was picked up an hour later on Chatham Street, hiding in a cooler in a produce store.

Court also was told the youth checked into the Imperial Inn Friday and until Wednesday ran up a bill of $211.35 for food, lodging and long distance telephone calls.

One of the calls cost $70 and another $35. He left the hotel early Wednesday and was arrested after he returned later in the morning. He gave a California address but carried a visa with a New Jersey address, police said. He had just over $40 with him.

Nieves told police at the time of his arrest he could get the money from friends if given a chance. However, when searched a return bus ticket to Vancouver was found.

Magistrate Ostler said this fact was significant and also noted the youth told police he bought the ticket several days earlier although it had a Wednesday date on it.

No luggage was found in the room rented by the accused. Nieves said it was at the bus depot.

James Thomas Crofton of Kelowna was fined $25 after he pleaded guilty to wilful damage. He also was ordered to pay $13 compensation.

Court was told he threw a glass ashtray at a glass partition in the Churchill Hotel early Thursday morning following a dispute with the hotel clerk over making a long distance telephone call.

"It's a curious thing for a sober man to do," commented Magistrate William Ostler.

Crofton said he was provoked by the clerk.

Ronald Turner, 18, of 3378 Anchorage, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft. Police said he took three wallets and a purse from a Saanich home.

He was remanded to May 8 for sentence and also on charges of breaking and entering and theft to which he pleaded guilty last week.

Richard Hardisty, 18, of the same address, charged jointly with Turner in some of the incidents also will be sentenced then. They were to be sentenced Thursday.

Andrew B. Thomas was fined $150 for driving while his right to obtain a licence was suspended. Garry Fenn, 993 Nicholson, was fined $400 for impaired driving.

Leonard Cole, 65, was sentenced to one year in jail on four charges of false pretences.

He was given a concurrent six-month term on two charges of obtaining lodgings by fraud.

Magistrate Ostler said he felt sympathy for the man but the public must be protected.

"I think it's very pathetic," he said.

Cole pleaded guilty earlier this week and at that time his criminal record dating back to 1920 on similar offences was read.

Cole blamed most of his troubles on a two-year penitentiary term received for theft when he was 16.

He Said Little, Had No Enemies ... And Thereby Became Premier

CHICHESTER-CLARK
. . . no controversy

BELFAST (CP) — James Chichester-Clark, the new man at the top in turbulent Northern Ireland, is an unknown quality in politics.

He becomes premier, succeeding Terence O'Neill at the head of a strife-torn Unionist party, largely because he has made no enemies.

His success in holding together a country torn by riot and continual strife between Protestant and Roman Catholic depends on whether the Protestant-dominated Unionists keep a pledge to give him 100-per-cent support.

A renewal of the infighting in the party of the last three years will throw his government back into the crisis that ended the career of O'Neill.

Chichester-Clark, 46, is a diffident former soldier with only two years administrative experience as minister of agriculture. He once served for two years as aide-de-camp to Field Marshal Alexander of Tunis when the latter was Canadian Governor-General.

His political centre of gravity is difficult to pinpoint. He kept in the premiership race by showing just enough toughness to satisfy hardline Protestants and just enough of a hint of flexibility to reassure liberals.

NO HOT STATEMENTS

One report says he has made no enemies because, so far as the record shows, he has never made a single statement that could cause the slightest controversy.

He resigned as minister of agriculture in protest against the timing of O'Neill's move to introduce one-man, one-vote in local elections.

The present property franchise system in municipal elections is generally held to favor Protestants. Chichester-Clark said he thought any change at this time might inflame militant Protestants to bloodshed.

Chichester-Clark declares he will not go back on O'Neill's reform program.

But in a recent interview he said: "I will make my first priority the easing of tension. Until that is achieved, there can be little progress with reforms."

Chichester-Clark said he had few preconceived ideas about what direction his administration should take.

"I would play it by ear," he said.

Chichester-Clark said there could be no radical departure from the reform policies set out in the election manifesto of the ruling Unionist party. This included a one-man, one-vote franchise, although he thought emotions were too high to implement it now.

Chichester-Clark is a member of the Royal Black Institution, the elite of the exclusively Protestant Orange order, the powerful group which has strong influence in Northern Ireland's affairs.

He is typical of the Ulster aristocrat with a part-time interest in politics.

He was educated at Eton and in 1942 went into the crack Irish Guards.

He left the army in 1960 to take over the family seat in the Ulster Parliament which had once been held by his father and had been kept warm by his grandmother. He now represents South Derry.

The Chichester-Clarks trace their ancestry to John Chichester, one of the "planters" who Cromwell sent to Ireland in the 17th century to scourge the Catholic Irish.

In the fight with Brian Faulkner for the premiership, Chichester-Clark had the support of the party faction loyal to O'Neill.

TOO MANY ENEMIES

The closeness of the vote—17 for Chichester-Clark, 16 for Faulkner—shows that the O'Neill supporters are a dwindling band. But Faulkner, by far the more experienced politician and a man never afraid of a controversial issue, had made too many enemies to win the day.

Chichester-Clark is a farmer and is married with two daughters and a stepson. Shooting, fishing, and skiing are his hobbies.

The O'Neill faction, in pressing his claim on the premiership, discounted his lack of administrative experience and stressed instead his shining honesty. One example, perhaps apocryphal, concerns his reported reply to a reporter who asked if he thought the last six months of riots had hit the North's tourist trade.

"I don't know," the story goes. "If I were an American I wouldn't come at the best of times."

Chichester-Clark was born on Feb. 12, 1923, at Castledawson in County Londonderry. He left the army with the rank of major.

DENT WILL MAKE BID FOR NDP NOMINATION

QUESNEL (CP)—Former Quesnel MLA Hartley Dent, 39, of the New Democratic Party, said Thursday he changed his mind and now intends to seek the party nomination at a convention here May 17.

He was defeated by Robert Bonner, Social Credit's attorney-general in a 1966 byelection. Mr. Dent later lost in the 1968 federal election to Liberal Paul St. Pierre.

'Great Injustice,' Judge Complains

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario cabinet Thursday removed Judge Lucien Kurata, 46, from the bench after a report tabled in the legislature found him unfit to serve "by reason of misbehavior."

Judge Kurata said later in an interview the report, written by Mr. Justice Donald A. Keith of the Supreme Court of Ontario, "confirms the great injustice I have complained of from the beginning."

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart tabled the 221-page report, based on an inquiry conducted earlier this year by Mr. Justice Keith.

The report found that within a 76-day period last fall Mr. Kurata attempted suicide, offered to use his influence to aid a prostitute facing charges and made the same promise to a young policewoman in the belief that she, too, was a prostitute.

Mr. Justice Keith found Mr. Kurata "testified falsely" before the inquiry on the incidents involving the prostitute, Kathy Lonsberry, and the policewoman, Marlene Watson.

The issue, says the Supreme Court judge, was whether Mr. Kurata sought sexual gratification from women he believed to be prostitutes, in return for his influence to pervert justice by relief from punishment.

Mr. Justice Keith rejected Mr. Kurata's contention that he was the victim of a conspiracy by police officers who did not like his court decisions on the grounds he was too soft on prostitutes.

'USEFULNESS' IMPAIRED

"I must deal with his suggestion that he was the victim of a police conspiracy to destroy him. That statement alone would seem to me to impair his usefulness as a magistrate, called upon scores of times daily to decide cases in which police officers, male and female, are vital witnesses."

Mr. Kurata is the first judge to be removed from office since the Provincial Courts Act last year gave magistrates the title of provincial judges and higher salaries. His removal came on the third anniversary of his appointment to the bench.

Mr. Kurata said he learned of the report with regret and disappointment, "but not with surprise in view of the way the inquiry was conducted."

The report is critical of evidence presented on Mr. Kurata's behalf. It accepts the evidence of the prostitute, Mrs. Lonsberry and rejects Mr. Kurata's evidence he had never seen her before. The report calls her a "truthful witness."

Probably no task that an individual may tackle can be more meaningful than to help a handicapped child along the road to self dependence.

This clinic has a recorded success in its accomplishments in this field. The Government is gratified that it was able to further those objectives with a financial grant to these new quarters.

Priests Seeking Right to Marry

DETROIT (AP) — New moves are developing among Roman Catholic priests for a change in church rules giving them the option either to remain celibate or to marry—without any break in their ministry.

Public declarations on the matter came this week from clergy groups in various places, including Detroit and New York, in the wake of action by American Roman Catholic bishops reaffirming the celibacy requirement.

Further steps also were taken in shaping a new organization set up to seek the right of married priests to continue in their religious vocation.

"These are married priests available now who are ready to go to work with the understanding that the structure of authority has got to be shared," said Rev. Pat Best, treasurer of the new group, the Society of Priests for a Free Ministry.

MEMBERSHIP GROWING

It reports a growing membership of 250 who want to pursue their religious careers as married priests.

The president is Eugene C. Bianchi, a Jesuit-trained theologian, now teaching religion at Methodist-run Emory University in Atlanta.

Father Best, engaged to be married in June, was a priest in Des Moines until a year ago. He applied for dispensation from his celibacy vows, in the view that he eventually would marry, and now is a vocational rehabilitation expert treating deaf children for the state of Michigan.

He estimated that from 2,000 to 10,000 priests left their religious vocations in the United States in the last year. However, no definitive figures are available, and some studies suggest about 3,000 or less.

Still other surveys have shown that the majority left to be married. Also, national polls of priests indicate about two-thirds of them feel priests should have the option of marrying. So do half of the seminarians.

Similar sentiments were voiced Wednesday by 38 Detroit priests, who challenged the church law forbidding priests to marry, and said they consider themselves free to marry and continue their work as priests.

"Marriage should never be a state which rules out one for the service of the church at any level," their statement said.

Rev. Jerome Fraser, corresponding secretary of the 130-member Association of Detroit Priests, said the statement would be circulated among the membership to seek further signatures.

AT THE POLLS

Women Have Become Own Worst Enemies

By ELIZABETH FORBES

The Times had just been delivered on Wednesday when my telephone rang and I was asked to further explain a sentence in my column that evening which said "there is a great difference between the part women play at the polls and the one they take in actual political leadership".

Forbes

Truthfully speaking, I thought this was a well-known fact. There is a great difference, everywhere, between the part women play at the polls and the one they take in actual political leadership.

In nearly every instance, women and men vote in almost equal numbers but the percentage of women candidates, anywhere, is extremely small.

I've read articles and I've sat in around table discussions on this subject. And one major reason that always arises for the slow progress of women in politics is the reluctance of men to surrender elective or appointive opportunities. A fact that is also true in public service.

People tell you that the old argument that women are not qualified for political office or policy-making posts, no longer holds water. Yet, its influence still persists.

★ ★ ★

A change of attitude is needed. But certainly it won't come from men. It must be brought about by women, through their force of numbers, use of their economic power potential, more and better candidates for all elective and appointive offices and, above all, the determined support of women by women.

This last is one aspect of the political picture in which women in the new and the developing nations have much to teach to those of our older world. For they are found participating in government at all levels and holding positions that carry policy-making powers and prestige.

How have they done it? This is something which women of the western world should waste no time in studying.

We have reached a point in history where woman has secured most of the tools she needs to achieve full partnership with men, politically and in other fields.

Her emphasis is on such a partnership. Not on substituting women for men. And her strongest political argument is precisely in the fact that she is different from man and that each is a necessary complement to the other.

★ ★ ★

By stressing her special qualifications and achievements, modern woman could convince governments as well as voters that in not suffering from the same shortcomings as her male counterparts, she is not likely to repeat the mistakes that mark the lnog road of man's unchallenged rule over human society.

Politically-minded women are aware of other women's assets which could bear fruit in this field, but they do not seem to see quite as clearly what makes them ineffectual as a political force.

Road blocks arise from tradition and custom, ingrained habits of thought, obsolete legislation and the scanty development by women of those traits of character needed for political leadership.

Perhaps even more significant is the fact that women are their own worst enemies when they lack willingness to sacrifice, or even risk security for an uncertain struggle, such as any election or other political contest.

★ ★ ★

These faults, which women in the new and developing countries seem to have overcome with great success and in a very few years, but which definitely exist in our western world, could be wiped out if all trained women really understood the world's desperate need of what they have to offer and were then prepared to accept the challenge of the hour.

It is also my belief that in addition to voting and to seeking office, and regardless of the presence or otherwise of women in our various levels of government, it is our responsibility to keep abreast of the decisions, policies and legislative action of our governments.

By doing so we are then able, whenever and wherever possible, to offer wise and clear-thinking opinions on public affairs, aimed at the preservation and strengthening of good government at all levels.

Druggists Maintain Welfare Surcharge

Combines investigation or not, B.C. druggists will continue putting a $1 surcharge on welfare patients' prescriptions until the provincial government negotiates a new payment scale.

That was the response Thursday from Peter Bell, executive co-ordinator of the B.C. Professional Pharmacists' Society, to the announcement that a federal investigator would come to B.C. next week at Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell's request.

Bell said the society was aware of the development but whether the surcharge violates anti-combines legislation "is not, however, the primary issue.

"In spite of his diversionary tactics and threats of combines legislation, our case remains unchanged."

He added that the surcharge will come off "as soon as the (provincial) government will sit down with us and negotiate a mutually acceptable welfare drug agreement."

He said so far Campbell has refused to negotiate the present scale of payments made to pharmacists for welfare patients' prescriptions.

"Pharmacists have no other choice, short of discontinuing service altogether, than to seek partial reimbursement of their losses through the surcharge.

"Campbell has to realize that you cannot buy 1969 services for 1954 payment levels and methods."

'Enemy' Pops When Shot

OTTAWA (CP) — Balloons—the 10-cent variety—are adding realism and a marked improvement in shooting accuracy to the training of infantrymen in the Canadian forces.

Training officers, adopting a method used by the German army before the Second World War, are using balloons shaped like men to simulate attacks on infantry units.

The balloons are attached to sleds drawn by bullet-proofed army vehicles as they race across training areas toward the infantrymen deployed in defensive formations.

One training officer said the method was used last summer to train groups of militiamen and improved their shooting accuracy to 450 from 250 yards.

The officer said the men trained with balloons were asked to indicate their reactions in a questionnaire and results were highly favorable.

The men generally liked the system—known as Operation Revitalize—and indicated they derived great satisfaction from seeing the immediate reaction to their shooting when the "enemy went down."

They also said they had developed more confidence in the other men in their groups as a result of the new method, and their fighting units were more tightly knit.

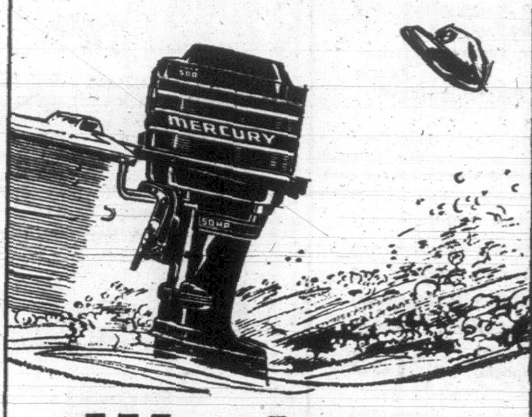
ECUMENICAL SERVICE

A special ecumenical service will be held Sunday at the Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt to honor the men who served and died at sea during the Battle of the Atlantic.

Rev. H. A. Mortimer and Rev. Father Regis Pelletier, command chaplains for Maritime Command Pacific, will officiate in the service to be held in the base drill shed at 11:15 a.m.

Rear-Admiral John A. Charles, commander, Maritime Pacific, will read the lesson. Wives and families of members of the armed forces and the general public are invited.

Who gets you off to the fastest start?



We do.

With Thunderbolt. Our Breakerless Thunderbolt ignition really socks it to 'em. You get the fastest voltage rise in the marine industry. Thunderbolt delivers up to 40,000 volts to the Polar Gap spark plugs at twenty times the build-up rate on conventional ignition systems. It will fire spark plugs over a wider range of engine rpm and operating conditions than any other ignition system in the marine industry. It keeps plugs clean and strong after hours of trolling. Engine life is greatly extended because of the absence of preignition caused by deposits on conventional spark plugs. And there are no breaker points to burn, adjust, wear, or to go out of timing.

Thunderbolt—first electronic ignition for outboards—is standard on five of our new '69 Mercurys . . . 50, 65, 80, 100, and 125 hp. One of 'em is bound to get you off to your fastest start yet. Come in and talk it over.

The flowers are blooming their little heads off, the regional hospital board is dancing around its May-Pole, and out at Victoria-Colquitz postal substation, a language difficulty has arisen.

It began when a new manual of financial procedure for assistant postmasters arrived in the mail this week.

Sub postmaster Kenneth D. Phillips waited for a free moment, then leafed through the manual.

Presently he came on a table of bilingual figures, and ran an eye down it. "One, Un—Two, Deux—Three, Trois"... and so on till he came to a pair that brought him up short.

The French equivalent, "Quarante" for "Forty" was correct, but the corresponding number on the English side was spelled "Fourty."

Then came 'Fourty-one, and eventually, 'Fourty-nine.'

Phillips consulted me on this spelling, but I can find no dictionary authority for it.

Did the Queen's Printer make a marathon error?

Is someone at Ottawa trying to rewrite one of Canada's official languages?

Or (my query) has the Postal Branch dug up an obsolete spelling to match present deliveries?

In Saanich, lovely Saanich, our taxes don't just go up like other peoples'. They go up-up. As a result, many citizens of the overburdened municipality are taking a healthy interest in how their tax dollars are spent.

One of these is a Gordon Head woman who looked out of her window the other morning to see a couple of municipal employees filling in a depressed strip where earth had settled over a storm drain installed a few months ago.

"The men were dropped off at 8:15 a.m.," she reports. "The strip that needed attention was about two feet wide by 40 long. They finished the job about 9:30, but nobody came back to pick them up.

"They didn't have a thing to do until close to noon. Then a truck called around and took them away. I'm not blaming the workmen—it wasn't their fault—but with our taxes going up again, the poor planning higher up irritated me. I simply don't think that our tax money should be wasted like that."

What particularly bugged the lady, she asserts, was the knowledge that the neighboring vacant lot growing up in weeds belongs to the municipality.

"Why," she asks, "couldn't those men have been put to work on the weeds?"

To that question, I'll add another. When is school tax going to be taken off property and related to homeowner's income, where it belongs?

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has announced that the passport office is being beefed up with extra staff, the better to process 12,500 passports a week.

Some of the calls and letters I've been getting from incensed trip-planners indicate that Sharp would do well to carry the matter farther.

Example: Husband who finally received his passport and found his wife's picture pasted into it. She got his.

Example: The applicant who, when asked to supply a school principal's name as reference, sent a school superintendent's instead. Won't do, came the answer from the red tape jungle. The form asks distinctly for a principal's name. Really!

Here's a suggestion to visitors, and to elderly residents who lack car transport. For a round-trip ride past handsome houses, oak-shaded lawns and a wealth of spring blooms, hop an Uplands bus at Yates and Douglas. It will cost you two 20-cent fares, which it shouldn't. But I think you'll enjoy it.

SEVEN MILLION DOLLARS is being spent by the provincial government on two projects in west-central Saanich municipality. At right is the $2,285,000 vocational school which should be completed by the end of this year. At left, with boilerhouse and laundry completed a year ago, is site for Glendale Hospital. It will contain 300 beds for treatment of retarded children and adults as well as the physically handicapped. Construction building permit worth $4,914,000 has been issued by Saanich for the work. The vocational school, which will serve southern Vancouver Island, is the first stage of what will be a $4.5 million school.

Revamp Ordered On Voter List By 'Old Gambler'

Premier Bennett Thursday said he had ordered a province-wide enumeration to bring all voters lists up to date within a year.

He added this did not necessarily mean a general election would be held next year but Opposition Leader Tom Berger appeared to take it that way.

"The old gambler has lost his nerve," Berger chuckled after the announcement.

"I think the premier doesn't know whether to call an election or not."

He said it was obvious Bennett "toyed with the idea" of a snap election after the NDP convention elected himself as leader "but then he lost his nerve.

"That was a mistake because the longer he takes the more certain a New Democratic Party victory."

Bennett telephoned the press gallery to make his announcement.

'LOT OF TALK'

"There has been a lot of talk, you know, about an election this year and next year," he said, "and there has been great interest in the province about enumeration of voters.

"We have received a number of requests and, while we have a continuous voters' list that can be brought up to date from time to time, I am giving instructions that this list be brought up to date over the next few months by enumeration.

"I want to answer this publicly because I think these things should be answered publicly.

"I am asking the deputy provincial secretary to have this done over the next 12 months.

"Of course, as well, when an election is called we will open special booths to these lists up to date."

DO IT NOW

(Anyone qualifying can have his name put on the list now by contacting electoral officers in his area but under an enumeration the electoral officers systematically contact the residents of their areas by personal house calls, telephone or mail.)

Bennett was asked if the 12-months length for the enumeration meant there would be no election this year after all.

"No, I'm not saying that at all," he replied. "An election can come anytime but we are doing this (enumeration) now."

He also was asked if the enumeration would take the house-to-house form used by the federal government.

"Whatever the chief electoral officer decides," said the premier.

"He knows the situation and whenever he thinks a door-to-door enumeration is needed, it will be done."

'GOOD THING'

Berger said he welcomed the decision to hold an enumeration but it should be a house-to-house canvass to be as complete as possible.

"I think it will be a good thing to have the voters on the voters' list at last."

He said since the last election the province's population has grown but the total number of voters on the list had declined because it has been allowed to contniue being seriously out of date.

"It is disgraceful that thousands of people were denied the franchise because the lists were not kept up to date," he said.

Heavy Seas Cut Fishermen's Take

Commercial salmon fishermen working off the west coast of Vancouver Island have been hampered by rough seas since the fishing season opened two weeks ago.

But fisheries inspector Harry Granger of Victoria said landings of spring salmon up to April 26 were to within 300 pounds of last year.

Vocational Unit Ready By November

The first phase of a vocational school for lower Vancouver Island will be completed about November but the date classes will open has yet to be set.

Ultimately the school will cost about $4,500,000.

Two buildings now nearing completion on the site north of Wilkinson Road (see photo above) house 10 workshops with class and storage rooms at the rear. The second phase of construction will see them joined by a stores building.

Education Minister Donald Brothers earlier announced the long-sought school will double vocational training facilities in the Greater Victoria area.

The vocational programs now conducted in scattered rented locations in the area will be continued there until the school's second phase goes up. No date for a start on it has been announced.

TWELVE COURSES

Brothers has said the new school will provide training in 12 programs—welding and steel fabrication, automotive repairs, autobody repairs, carpentry and building construction, industrial electricity-electronics marine and stationary diesel engineering, small engine repair and maintenance, upgrade and refresher training in the piping trades, hospital orderly training, cook, waiter, waitress and steward training.

Other programs being considered are navigation upgrading and shipboard safety certification for the marine industry and sales training for the many retail outlets in the area.

MERGER POSSIBLE

More recently the Greater Victoria school board has launched plans for a district college, raising the prospect of some sort of merger between it and the vocational school operation.

During debate on education estimates in March, Brothers said the time has come to study advantages of melding such facilities.

City, Saanich Taking Lead As Building Shoots Ahead

1,000 DUE SATURDAY ON CHARTER

More than 1,000 tourists will arrive in Victoria Saturday, but they'll only be in town five hours.

CPR officials said today between 1,000 and 2,000 Boeing Company employees will be on a Princess Marguerite charter cruise from Seattle scheduled to dock in the Inner Harbor at 12:30 p.m

The short-order tourists will reboard the ship later in the afternoon for the return trip to Seattle at 5:30 p.m.

Daily CPR sailings between Seattle and Victoria, which began today, will be suspended in order to accommodate the charter cruise, but will continue Sunday through the next five months.

DR. MARGARET NEWTON
... wheat rust researcher

NEW HONORS FOR SCIENTIST

Dr. Margaret Newton of Victora will return this month to her old Prairie stamping grounds where she made a major contribution to Canada's economy and helped avert famine in many parts of the world.

A pioneer in research to control wheat rust, she will attend the Diamond Jubilee Convocation of the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon on May 13 and receive an honorary doctor of laws degree.

She was on the biology faculty at the university from 1919 to 1925.

Dr. Newton has received many honors for her fundamental research in wheat rust—a fungus which reduces crop yields.

It was the curse of the Prairie provinces before she showed how the disease could be controlled.

MANY TYPES

Her research revealed there were many types of rust and that wheat might be immune to one variety but susceptible to another.

Prior to that it had been accepted that there was only one variety in Canada and the United States. This explained why the early efforts to breed rust-resistant wheat had failed.

Her work had world-wide impact. She was invited by Russia in 1933 to organize a rust research laboratory.

In 1925 she was appointed senior plant pathologist at the newly-established Dominion Rust Research Laboratory in Winnipeg where she remained for 20 years.

AWARDED MEDAL

Here, her work became an indispensable guide to plant breeders in producing wheat varieties resistant to all the races of rust.

For her rust studies, she was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada in 1942 and was presented with the Society's Flavelle Medal in 1946.

The University of Minnesota granted her its outstanding achievement award and gold medal in 1956 and the University of Victoria has named one of its recently completed women's residences in her honor.

Area Total Up $8.4M In First Four Months

The construction pace on southern Vancouver Island is speeding up.

Hefty boosts from the city and Saanich have lifted the dollar value of building permits in the first four months to $24,202,839, up $8.4 million on the same period last year.

The figures are from Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Central Saanich and Sidney. Figures were not available from North Saanich and Langford-Colwood-Metchosin.

The city again leads the way with permits worth $11.13 million, up $2.87 million over the same period last year. Contributing to the increase were seven apartments worth $3.63 million during April alone.

17 APARTMENTS

So far this year, 17 apartments worth $6.47 million have received building permits.

In Saanich, a single permit last month was worth $4,914,000—for the 300-bed Glendale Hospital. The total for the month was $6.57 million, bringing the total so far this year up to $8.97 million.

Single-family and duplex construction picked up a little in April but remained down for the first four months with 137 dwellings worth $2.96 million against 178 dwellings worth $3.45 million last year.

OAK BAY ZOOMS

Building permit value in Oak Bay has almost quadrupled, to $1.5 million this year compared with $480,765 in the first four months of last year.

Contributing to this were three apartments worth a total of $662,500 and several school projects worth $377,136.

Esquimalt, Central Saanich and Sidney remained steady.

In Esquimalt, the four-month total was $819,945, down slightly from last year, while Central Saanich was $994,085, up slightly. However, Central Saanich was dominated by extensions to schools worth a total of $688,038 and home construction has declined due to restrictions to curb pollution.

Sidney reported its four-month total at $763,634, compared with $793,286 in the same period last year.

Girls' School May Move To Blenkinsop

One of Victoria's leading private schools may move from the city to a site near Blenkinsop Lake in Saanich.

St. Margaret's School for Girls is now located on Fort Street but the site has been sold.

Municipal planner Tom Loney said there have been preliminary discussions with school officials, but the school has not submitted a rezoning application for the new site.

"It depends on a good deal more than that—sewers for one thing," he added.

The tentative site is just north of Lakehill public school. Council approval would be necessary not only for rezoning but also to tie the girls' school in with the Willow-McBriar secondary sewage treatment plant.

A school spokesman said 30 acres has been bought for the new site.

The plans are, subject to Saanich approval of rezoning and sewers, to spend $250,000 for the school and $250,000 for a residence for boarders.

There is no time limit for the school to vacate its present premises.

Can a Horse Be Guilty Of Trespass?

A woman found guilty today in central court of allowing her horses to trespass on private property told the magistrate she would rather go to jail than pay a fine.

"I'm not guilty," Phyllis Barcelo, 1530 Stockton, told Magistrate William Ostler.

"I won't pay a fine, I'd rather go to jail."

She was ordered to pay a fine of $10 or serve two days in default.

During her trial court was told two horses belonging to the woman were found on the front lawn of a house on Cedar Hill Road. They had been seen to climb through a fence surrounding some adjacent property where they usually grazed.

Defence counsel Robert Price argued that the charge should be dismissed partially on the grounds that horses couldn't trespass.

INTERESTING POINT

In his judgment the magistrate said that was the most interesting point of the case but ruled against it.

He said he felt the word trespass in the bylaw was being used in a philological sense.

"That appears to saddle the horse with an equinine mens rea (guilty mind or intent)," he said.

As the woman hastily left the court she said to the magistrate, "I'm no more guilty than if your dog looked in a window and you were charged with being a peeping Tom."

The magistrate chose to ignore the remark and Mr. Price paid the fine for his client.

BCFP Announces New Manager At Plywood Mill

Walter Pumfrey became new manager of B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Victoria plywood division Thursday with promotion of Rex Humphreys to company headquarters in Vancouver.

BCFP secretary Norman Gish said today Humphreys is named assistant to the vice-president, lumber and plywood, and will be involved in future planning for the company.

Pumfrey, who was plywood sales manager, came to BCFP shortly after leaving University of B.C. and has been involved in every phase of the Victoria mill's development since its construction 17 years ago.

Walter Nelson, manager of the Victoria sawmills division, becomes senior management representative for community relations, a post held by Humphreys since retirement of Bert Barnes four months ago.

GUIDE LEADERS LEARN NEW LOOK

Early, Early Birds Jump the Gun

By PAT DUFOUR

How would you like to "rise and shine" at 5 a.m. and work right through until 10 p.m.?

Thirty women from all parts of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland are doing that this week ... and loving every minute of it.

They are Guiders, Brownie and Ranger leaders, commissioners and local Girl Guide Association members attending the first provincial outdoor workshop.

Based at a summer Baptist camp on Lands End Road, overlooking the waters of Colburne Passage, the women arrived Wednesday afternoon and will be here until Sunday afternoon.

NEW LOOK

The workshop is part of a national campaign to give Guiding a new look ... concentrated on the outdoors.

The workshop's program convener, Marjorie Christmas of Duncan, says "We're determined to get people excited about the world we live in and the role we play in it. To do this we must understand our environment."

She explains that the program got under way last August when the first national outdoors workshop was held at a conservation school near Toronto.

"Three of us went from British Columbia, myself and two Guiders from Prince George and Kimberley. They, too, will be organizing workshops within the next few weeks."

This week's program is designed for early risers; so early, that when delegates were out in the fields at 5:30 a.m. Thursday morning for a session of bird watching they had to wait a while before the early bird showed up!

They have reason to be grateful for his tardiness. This morning they were allowed to sleep in until 5:30 a.m. ... and still made a second bird watching session in time.

The main purpose of the workshop is to stress how Guiders can use resource personnel in their districts to help teach Guides to fully appreciate the outdoors.

A battery of experts is giving their time and talents to this week's sessions.

INDIANS COMING

Subjects range from weather, general and forest ecology, protection of plant habitat, to intertidal life, insects, pollution and the preparation needed to take a company or pack on a field trip.

Part of Saturday's program will see members of the Cowichan Indian Band at the camp to show how to knit and card wool, carve totem poles and basket weave.

Many of the women attending have had to hire babysitters to take care of their children, and several, like Mrs. Christmas, have had to forfeit almost a week's wages in order to be here.

Mrs. Christmas reports that each of the delegates attending will go back to their respective divisions and organize similar workshops for Guiders this summer.

Next summer it is hoped that the workshop program will have reached the Guide level.

She adds, "This is the beginning of an ever-growing whirlpool by which we hope to get every youngster in the movement out of the classroom and back to the outdoors.

"If we can do this Guiding will be the full and exciting life that the Baden-Powells foresaw so many years ago."

SHOPPING GUIDE

All-Purpose Cleaner Comes to Victoria

By PENNY SAVER

Housewives unite! No longer do you have to sniff ammonia to get that grimy house clean. Just this week a new, concentrated cleaner arrived on the shelves of many Victoria stores. It contains no ammonia and doesn't have that sharp, nose-searing scent that makes ammonia so hard to work with, but it will clean, and clean and clean.

There is almost no limit to the things it will clean: ovens, windows, rugs even aircraft bodies if you happen to have one lying around. I am told it won't clean suede or bonded fabrics, but then, what will? With anything as touchy as those two a patch test is a good idea even when you are using an old favorite.

This pale blue cleaner comes in a plastic spray top bottle. This makes it easy to apply straight to trouble spots like greasy finger-prints, black heel marks or grimy shirt collars. For most household cleaning jobs it is diluted. For painted walls, floors, ceramic, tiles and rugs, to name just a few, the dilution is one part cleaner to 10 parts water. Windows and formica require one part cleaner to 100 parts water. Other graduations of dilution are shown on a chart that comes with every bottle while extra heavy jobs including ovens and white-wall tires require that the cleaner be used full strength. The aircraft body, incidentally, takes a one to three dilution.

The manufacturers recommend that rubber gloves should be worn, though I have dabbled my fingers in the undiluted cleaner without any visible side effects. It goes without saying that the bottle should be kept out of the way of curious and thirsty children.

Gallon Size Available

On the shelves, this cleaner comes in 24 ounce bottles costing $1.19 each. This is an introductory price that will go up 10 cents once the product is established. If a monster cleaning job is looming on the horizon, this product can be ordered in one-gallon lots costing $4.95. Since production headquarters are in Pitt Meadows, just outside of Vancouver, delivery should not take long. Your local dealer should be able to put the order through.

Industrially this cleaner has many uses. It will clean motors, swimming pools or canvas tents, removing pitch, tar or grease. It will clean automobiles too, though the company also makes a special car shampoo for use both inside and outside the car. This shampoo has a slightly different formula than the regular cleaner and will soon be available at several automotive supply stores, if it is not available already.

In short, this is an all purpose cleaner, non-abrasive and, for the most part, safe. Just spray it on, rub it in then wipe it, and the dirt, off. And if you aren't satisfied with the results, the company has a money-back guarantee.

If you have any questions on this column, please call 382-3131 between 9 am. and 4 p.m.

THE BETTER HALF

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer:

My son will be married in September, and I would like you to suggest a fabric that would make a lovely dress for me. I can't seem to visualize the pattern and the fabric for this important occasion. — Mrs. D. A.

Dear Mrs. D. A.:

You have left out so many details that it is very difficult for me to give you any suggestions. The time of day is very important, and where the reception will be held. Naturally, an evening wedding could be much more formal than one held during the day. A reception at a country club would require a more formal dress than one held at the church.

In order to generalize, I would say that in September I would like to see a dress of silk crepe, Alaskine, satin, lightweight wool, or perhaps a suit or ensemble with velvet as an accent. Look through your fashion magazines and select something that is appropriate for you, lovely to look at, but at the same time, you must remember that you will be in the background and not let your own ensemble create more excitement than the bride's gown. Too many women try too hard!

Dear Mrs. Farmer:

I know it's a bit late to be talking about fake furs, however, I am going away to college this fall and want to begin my college wardrobe now so that I won't have to rush this fall. I want to make a fake fur coat and would like to put set-in sleeves in it like the ones that I have found ready-made. Can I do this when I make a coat or does this require a special sewing machine? — Jane W.

Dear Jane:

How great that you are already planning for fall! Hope your mother is as proud of you as I am. Yes, you can use almost any pattern for fake fur that you would use for any coat fabric. It seems a bit heavy when you are working with it. However, it is very pliable (if you use a good quality) and will work out beautifully if you can just forget it is fake fur.

After any seams have been stitched, when you are working with fake furs, just take a needle and pull the fur out of your seams. This will make the seams virtually invisible and look more like real fur garments. Incidentally, you might consider a fake fur skirt to match your coat. They are really eye-catching if you have the kind of a figure that goes along with it!

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a member of a small church in a very small community.

We have a young minister, 28 years old with five children. He is a very dedicated man, but his wife is a millstone around his neck.

She attends Sunday worship, but that is all. She has a girl staying with her to help with the children, so she can't use that as an excuse for not being more active in church work.

She's a chain-smoker and plays cards. She even had a card party while we were having our mid-week prayer service and Bible study! The parsonage is right next door to the church, so we know this is a fact.

We have prayed for her and tried to be friendly, but she doesn't co-operate. Must we tell our pastor to leave? — Prayerfully Waiting

DEAR WAITING: Pray harder for her. And pray also for your young, dedicated minister. And while you're praying, pray for a little more compassion for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago our daughter was graduated from high school. She didn't particularly want to go to college, but we thought college would be good for her, so we sent her.

She was able to get a government loan for part of it, and we put the rest, which cost us about $1,000, which she promised to pay back. After the first year she quit school and married a man who is a lot better off financially than her father. He is a good husband to her, and we have no complaints, but here's the problem: Our son-in-law refuses to pay off the money our daughter borrowed from us to go to college. He says that this debt was incurred before he even knew her. In your opinion, who is — not legally but MORALLY responsible for this debt? And what do you advise us to do about it?—Average Parents.

DEAR PARENTS: Your daughter is MORALLY responsible for the debt since she gave her word to repay it. However, since your son-in-law is a "good husband," I suggest you forget it or you're apt to have your daughter back.

Dieting Program Involves the Whole Family

By WINNIFRED JARDINE

(Eleventh in a series)

When mom plunges into a new diet, it has an influence on every member of the family, for from her they learn their attitudes about food — its importance, its requirements, its disciplines.

No matter what kind of a dieting program she's caught up in, she will involve her children and husband in it, too.

If she healthfully slims herself down and stays svelte and trim, she'll inspire that same kind of action in her children — and they in turn will probably be healthy slim adults.

Seventy per cent of the nation's plump adolescents have one or both parents who are overweight ... not so much from heredity, it seems, as from growing up in a weight-inducing environment.

Mothers ought to be concerned about overweight children, for obesity among them — and especially among teenagers — is on the increase and has the medical profession worried. And yet a look at their eating habits would seem to pinpoint the trouble.

Teen-age girls are considered to have the poorest eating habits of any group in the nation. Shamefully, their mothers run them a close second. Mothers should take their daugters by the hand into a health-wise eating (and reducing, if necessary) program that will be not only a standard in their home today, but will be the basis for standards of eating in that daughter's home tomorrow.

INADEQUATE MEALS

Every survey that involves food habits of teen-agers tells the same story — that they're falling far short each day of getting proper amounts of the right foods. In one survey, less than half of the teen-age students interviewed were eating meals that could be considered "good."

In another, a large percentage of teen-agers had skipped breakfast entirely or eaten very little food and the wrong kind. Many of them ate hot school lunches and sack lunches that were adequate, but those who bought lunch over the counter were doing a poor job, buying mostly doughnuts, pasteries, candies and pop.

In a study made a few years ago only 12 per cent of the junior high school girls studied ate good breakfasts, while 29 per cent of the boys did. In an older group of girls only 11 per cent had eaten breakfasts that were considered "adequate." This brings the problem close to home, showing that both parents and their children need to foster better breakfast habits.

It's as important for our children to eat three regular meals a day as it is for adults. Nourishing breakfasts are vital to weight-wary teens and should include at least a glass of juice, an egg-or cereal, toast and milk.

INCREASES ENERGY

Not only does a hearty breakfast help them resist weight-baiting foods later in the day, but it provides such other rewards as more energy to go through the day, improved school work, a happier outlook.

A satisfying lunch renews energy, again staves off the temptation to nibble away at high-caloried foods. A good lunch for teens and children should include a meat and-or cheese sandwich, vegetable sticks, fresh fruit and milk and possibly a light dessert.

After-school snacks (which every child enjoys) may be considered a fourth meal and planned for, taking a switch toward low-caloried foods, if there's a tendency towards overweight, and always towards more nutitional foods — chilled tomato juice, fresh fruit, buttermilk, vegetable sticks (favorites at our house dipped into a seasoned cottage cheese dip), fresh or canned fruits, cheese cubes and deviled eggs, in addition to the always favorite cookies. Mothers can encourage this kind of after-school eating by keeping these foods on hand.

Exercise is an important part of daily life in the home where weight is kept under control and health is at a high peak. In a recent study of youngsters at a study camp, the overweight group spent only one-third as much time in physical exercise as the normal weight group.

DUNCAN — Duncan voters go to the polls Saturday to elect an alderman to city council in what promises to be a close contest.

Five candidates, including three from local businesses, a member of the clergy and a pulp mill employee are seeking the vacancy caused by the death of Robert Mason.

Angus Fraser, employed at Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited, contends there has been a lack of co-operation between the city and municipality of North Cowichan as exemplified by the defeat of the recreation bylaw. He favors joint services and long range planning under one administration.

Ronald Hill, manager of Auto Marine Electric, said he would, if elected, work toward recreation for older people and street improvements. Money for acquiring a street sweeper could better have been used to improve some of the worst streets, he said.

G. A. Kerr, an Anglican minister, said he favors sharing some services with North Cowichan and greater co-operation with the unorganized areas too. He would like to see more direct communication with officials of the Cowichan Indian Band.

James Morrissey, branch manager of Rockgas Propane, also wants to work toward closer co-operation with North Cowichan and improved recreation facilities.

Harold Allman is a real estate man who says he can bring to council his experience in that business plus earlier associations with lumber and shingle mills.

Ballots can be cast between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. at City Hall.

Transfers Facing 74 Loggers

DUNCAN — A total of 74 loggers from Shawnigan, Nanaimo River and Copper Canyon logging divisions will be transferred to other MacMillan Bloedel logging units, a company spokesman said today.

E. G. Stroyan said the transfer is necessary because in seeking to make up for lost production due to the severe winter, the company has reached the allowable production limit in one of its tree farms.

More than half of the men affected started with the company this year and seniority rights with the company will not be affected, Stroyan said.

Boom Men Honored for Safety

DUNCAN — The boom crew of Western Forest Industries at Honeymoon Bay has been honored at a ceremony at the Commercial Hotel for achieving a seven-year no-accident record.

Congratulations were offered by International Woodworkers of American official Louie Zuccolini and WFI manager Don Hammond.

Seventy-five persons attended the ceremony including members of the plant safety committee. The boom crew achievement represents more than half a million accident-free man hours.

Press Club Formed at Duncan

DUNCAN — Eight members of the working press have formed the Duncan Press Club.

Derek Rhind, columnist and reporter for the Cowichan Leader, was acclaimed president; Sharon Currie, reporter on the Leader, is secretary-treasurer. Ed Gould, Victoria Daily Times correspondent, was named publicity chairman.

Other members are Klaus Muenter and Donna Clements, The Daily Colonist and Ken Driedger, CKAY Radio.

Thefts 'Definitely Connected'

LAKE COWICHAN — RCMP here feel "there was a definite connection" between two separate safe robberies that took place during the last two months.

Corporal Scott Coxen said today the robbery ta the Royal Canadian Legion hall here March 11 and the April 28 break-in and safe-cracking job at Friesen's Low Cost Food Store at Honeymoon Bay "appear to have involved the same persons."

About $1,000 was taken in the Legion haul and $2,000 was taken from the safe at Honeymoon Bay plus $100 from the adjoining post office.

15,000 Brochures Ready

LAKE COWICHAN — The Chamber of Commerce has 15,000 brochures describing the vacation attractions of this area ready for distribution, secretary H. W. Cooper said today.

The brochures, assembled by Cooper, have a complete map of the road around Cowichan Lake with camp sites and boat ramps marked. Also supplied is information about fishing, hiking, hunting, boating and industrial potential.

Young Naturalists Plan Park Outing

The younger section of the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society will meet on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Douglas and Hillside for a field trip to John Dean Park at Mt. Newton.

There also will be a conducted tour around the Rain Forest Trail at Francis Park on Sunday at 2:15 p.m.

Impaired Driver

CHEMAINUS—Peder Helland of Chemainus, charged with impaired driving, was fined $300 and had his licence suspended for two years as a result of a two-vehicle accident April 19.

Several persons were injured in the accident, none seriously.

Humor Pays Off In Smoking War

Two Cowichan Senior Secondary School students have won $250 prizes in the Vancouver Island section of the first Smoke-Out campaign, sponsored by the B.C. Tuberculosis-Christmas Seal Society.

Grant Bolton presented a humorous entry and Malcolm Crockett used music as a medium.

Smoke-Out is a campaign open to Grade 11 and 12 students in the province in which they submit ideas on audio or video tape which could be directed at Grade 5, 6 and 7 students to dissuade them from smoking. In schools where such equipment is unavailable spot announcements or scripts can be entered.

The competition drew 30 entries from B.C. They were judged by broadcaster Beth Gillanders, director of the division of audio-visual services for the department of education, Barrie Black, and artist-teacher Charles G. Gosbee.

The two up-Island students have been invited to the society's annual meeting in Vancouver, May 15 to receive the awards. They will be accompanied by their teacher-sponsor, Jev Tothill.

The grand prize of $500 was won by a student of the Eric Hamber Senior Secondary School, Vancouver. Another of the school's students was awarded $250.

Other $250 winning entries in the Greater Vancouver area came from Point Grey Seoior Secondary, Sir Winston Churchill and University Hill schools.

BRIDGE LESSON

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

A teen-ager looking at an automobile with running boards and a crank might say, "What will they think of next?" Of course, well-informed teen-agers know more about all sorts of cars than their parents.

Similarly, a well-informed young bridge player would know that the modern trend to limit jump raises just takes us back to 1930 when forcing jump raises were just being invented.

North's jump to three hearts is one of those limit raises. He is not strong enough to force to game, yet his hand clearly calls for some sort of heart raise and mere two-heart caill is inadequate.

The limit jump raise gets South to game quickly. He has full values for his opening bid, plus one extra queen.

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♣A

Against any defence, except the ace of clubs lead followed by a club continuation, South will wrap up his contract since he only loses two aces and the king of diamonds. The actual defence forces South to show his mettle. If he wins the second club and goes right after trumps, East will hop up with his ace and give his partner a club ruff, whereupon West will get out with a spade and wait for his diamond trick.

An alert South will make the contract in spite of all East and West have done.

He will see the danger of an immediate trump play and will try to strip the West hand of any out cards first. Thus, he will cash the ace of spades at trick three, lead a spade to dummy's king at trick four, ruff a spade at trick five and then lead a trump.

East will take his ace and give his partner that club ruff but that will end proceedings for the defence. West will have to lead a diamond up to South's ace-queen combination and South won't have to lose a diamond trick.

Bloodletting Restored Order . . . With a Bitter After-Taste

By DAVE STOCKAND

WINNIPEG (CP) — Almost 50 years ago today, Winnipeg was on the precipice of making labor history in North America.

What followed was probably the greatest mass walkout the continent has ever known—the 1919 general strike with its hard and stirring times, its solidarities and its divisions, and a final bloodletting that restored order with a bitter after-taste.

All of those days, six weeks in May and June in the year after the First World War ended, were recalled here Thursday night.

The May Day anniversary meeting place was the R. B. Russell vocational school, named after one of the strike leaders imprisoned for seditious conspiracy.

Communis tTim Buck was the keynote speaker.

Stretched across the platform front was a banner which said: "We hail the 35,000 fighters who won collective bargaining rights for all-Canadian workers."

PETE SEEGER SINGS

It was a sentimental night of over-simplification. The Communists put it on, and more than 300 people turned up. There was piped-in Pete Seeger to entertain the audience before the show got under way about 20 minutes behind schedule.

Platform guests were people who had been active in, though not leaders of, the May 15-June 25 walkout in 1919.

There was also a message from perhaps the last-surviving "seditionist," Bill Pritchard, now living in retirement in California in his 82nd year.

He sent brotherly greetings, and said he found himself "haunted by remembrances" of the brief time he spent in Winnipeg during the strike siege.

Mr. Buck, 78, was nowhere near Winnipeg during the general strike. According to his biography he was, at that time, in the U.S. South helping the Negroes organize for their rights.

'A PERFECT EXAMPLE'

But he wrote recently in the Canadian Tribune, in a lengthy summary of the 1919 strike:

"The strike was a perfect example, perhaps the most perfect ever, of what the working class can accomplish by simply folding its arms."

And he said Thursday night: "There has never been a strike like it before. . . . There has never been anything exactly like it since."

The former Communist party leader in Canada, now its lively chairman, says of the then-and-now: "The difference is not that poverty has been abolished, but that today the working class will not accept it."

In summary, this is the story of the 1919 strike and its aftermath.

Just about everything was closed down at one time or another; newspapers, the telegraph, the mail; even restaurants; and there was no ice to be got when this was the only means of refrigeration.

SACK POLICEMEN

All during the six weeks it was stop-and-start. Oft-times there were no newspapers, no taxis, no streetcars. The entire police force got the axe; the policemen had voted in favor of striking but stayed on the job, but were sacked on the grounds that they could not be trusted in the crunch that was to come.

Civlians took over.

The general strike began as a stoppage in sympathy with striking metal and building workers seeking collective bargaining agreements.

All was comparatively happy-go-lucky at the start.

A reporter who went to the CPR shops at Weston to see the beginning of the strike said that the men came out laughing and joking like naughty schoolboys.

The strike started on a Thursday. And as historian D. C. Masters wrote:

"What produced the greatest sensation in the public mind was the failure of the bread and milk companies to deliver on Friday morning. No act of the strikers produced more violent condemnation in the press across Canada.

DELIVERIES RESUMED

"To be sure deliveries were soon resumed, but this did not save the strikers from the charge of attempting to starve infants and invalids.

"During the early stages of the strike between 25,000 and 35,000 workers went out. This meant for Winnipeg in general no mail, streetcars, taxis, newspapers, telegrams, telephones, janitor service, elevators, barbers, or express, freight or baggage service. For a time it meant no gasoline, milk, or bread, very little meat, and much reduced restaurant service."

Finally the strike boiled into the arrest of eight of its leaders on charges of seditious conspiracy; the firing of scores of employees, and a bloody Saturday when mounted police charged a throng gathered for a banned parade.

The strikers' resistance collapsed with the charge of mounted police armed with baseball bats, followed by another attack by the citizen policemen sworn in after the regular force members had been kicked out.

To all intents and purposes, the strike was over.

Sit-In Threatened By Group

A sit-in on the Legislative Buildings lawns by 4,000 poverty-stricken Victoria mothers and their children—"to open up the deaf ears of politicians"—was threatened Thursday night.

The proposal was discussed at a meeting of the Low-Income Group in First United Church.

Executive-secretary Reg Clarkson said today: "We are determined to step up our program of public education as a means of changing public policies on treatment of welfare cases."

The LIG's threat to stomp on flowers at the Buildings was tabled at the meeting.

'SYMBOLIC'

Clarkson said, "If it had gone to a vote last night it might have been defeated. But it still might be one of the direct actions we're forced to make . . . as a symbolic gesture."

Last year's figures, reported Clarkson, show 17,000 welfare cases in the province, with a total of 50,000 dependents. Vancouver Island had 2,500 families with a total of 7,500 dependents. The Greater Victoria area "stands roughly at 4,000."

At Thursday's meeting the group decided to incorporate as a society to be in a position to approach provincial and local authorities for assistance.

OBJECTIVE

It has three immediate objectives:

- ● To present grievances to the local association of social workers and Welfare Minister Dan Campbell on the abuse of welfare recipients by social workers.
- ● Establishment of an independent board to recommend family rates.
- ● Improvement of social work practices by local welfare staffs.

VOLUNTEERS

As part of the LIG's self-help program a system of lay social workers was established a year ago.

"These are volunteers—we have between 15 and 20 now—who go into the homes and try to help rehabilitate the families. They also act as advocates with welfare officials," Clarkson said.

Clarkson, himself a social worker, trained the volunteers with a series of five lectures, followed up with an assessment every second week.

The volunteers have documented their cases and grievances are based on the facts revealed in them.

Expedition Survivors Flown Out

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters) — A rescue helicopter today flew to a remote Himalayan outpost and brought back two survivors of a disastrous American mountaineering expedition.

William A. Read, 33, of Moose, Wyo., and Dr. Jeff Duenwold, 27, of Pullman, Wash., were brought to Katmandu from the police outpost of Jomoson, northeast of Mount Dhaukagiri.

They brought the first details of the accident in which five Americans and two Sherpa guides were killed.

An ice avalanche hit the expedition when the members were climbing at 17,000 feet at noon Monday, April 28.

Read and Duenwold said three other surviving Americans were trekking back from the expedition's base camp to the Nepalese town of Pokhara.

DRILLER KILLED

ALERT BAY (CP) — Melville Sutherland, 45, of Powell River, was killed Wednesday when crushed by a large rock at a road-building project at Rainbow Creek near here.

Police said Thursday that the victim had been drilling near the rock at the time of the mishap.

25,000 Workers May Be Idled

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's building program, involving more than $2,000,000,000 in commercial construction projects, is scheduled to shut down tonight, making 25,000 workers idle.

A meeting of the 100-member general contractor section of the Toronto Construction Association Thursday committed itself to halting all member projects at midnight, in a face-to-face meeting with 15 building trades unions.

GAGLARDI HUNTS STAFF FOR OFFICES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Minister without portfolio Phil Gaglardi Thursday said he is looking for staff for a chain of six offices across the province to deal with British Columbia's unemployment problem.

Mr. Gaglardi told the Vancouver Junior Chamber of Commerce that the committee he heads has already held two general meetings and two committee meetings to get organized.

"Lining up staff is our first step," in the provincial government's plan to persuade business and industry to hire the hard-core unemployed in their communities, he said.

Suggestion for Border

By HILDA BEASTALL

Beds and borders, whether solely of bedding annuals or herbaceous perennials, or of more permanent shrubby plants should be composed by the choice of the owner.

Hilda

Sometimes a suggestion triggers our thought mechanism into action so that we come up with results both satisfying and surprising.

So here is a suggestion—and may you have fun in adapting it to your own taste and requirements.

The combination is dainty Coral-bells (Heuchera sanguinea) and a dwarf, spreading Jacobs-ladder (which we believe to be Polemonium reptans).

These two have been chosen for many reasons. They are both perennial plants capable of being left to grow for several years without lifting for division.

For the first year of planting, the heuchera may produce few blooms, if any. In subsequent years, however, the season of flowering extends from May 1 until well into September.

The same general period of bloom is followed by Polemonium reptans, although first flowers are often out by mid-April.

Heuchera has dainty stems 12 inches tall of tiny coral colored bells, above basal rosettes of small reddish green leaves something like those of strawberry plants.

The pale lilac, five-petalled flowers of the polemonium come in clusters, each flower centred with a yellow throat and five gold-tipped anthers; the leaves are as attractive as the blossoms, being composed of many narrow, dark green leaflets alternate on the leaf stems.

Both these plants are about the same height making them ideal for planting in groups of three either in front of shrubs or as a solid border or bed in a sunny spot.

YOUR HEALTH

Depression Brilliantly Described

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Ever since 1908, when I read the remarkable book by Clifford Beers, The Mind That Found Itself, the story of a well-educated man's experience with insanity and mental hospitals — first a bad one and then a good one — I have been collecting all autobiographies of sick people that I have been able to find, and I now have some 600 volumes.

Alvares

I feel that the reading of such books is the best way of learning what psychosis and insanity, and living with mental and physical troubles, are like; and it is the best way of learning how to be a good, really helpful psychiatrist.

In 1961, I published a book, Minds That Came Back, based on a study of some 65 of the best autobiographies in my special library, and now I hope to live long enough to write several more such books.

I have just read a new book The Prison of My Mind, by Mrs. Barbara Field Benziger — a book which is the best description of a person's sufferings with depression that I have ever read. Mrs. Benziger is a fine writer; she is frank, and she is honest, and her descriptions of her mental distress and her experiences with several psychiatrists and three mental institutions are splendid and vivid, and should now be very helpful to psychiatrists, hospital administrators, depressed people, and people who have a depressed loved one.

★ ★ ★

Obviously, Mrs. Benziger had a strong hereditary tendency to mental trouble, and she was a bit odd as a child. She had an unhappy and lonely childhood, and she had little contact with her wealthy parents. She had the sorrow of losing contact with her father when he and her mother were divorced.

She married early and then her marriage was for many years unhappy — so unhappy that eventually she craved and got a divorce.

Mrs. Benziger gives a remarkable and distressing description of the first mental hospital into which she was sent. She describes so well the distress that a person must feel in the old-fashined type of mental hospital in which she suddenly finds herself locked into a room, with almost all of her belongings and all her legal rights taken from her.

★ ★ ★

Fortunately, her husband eventually came, and when he heard how desperately unhappy she was, he quickly took her out of the place. Then she went to a pretty bungalow-type of sanatorium, where the doors were open, and everyone was friendly, sympathetic, understanding and kind. There, Mrs. Benziger became much improved and after a while was able to go home.

fun with figures

By J A H HUNTER

"I haven't seen him these last five years, but that's Bill for sure," said Joe, handing back the photo. "How old is he now?"

Don thought a moment. "You figure it out," he replied. "If you add his age to its square you get one less than seven times the square of Ann's age."

You figure it out!

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Fortress Attacked By Amateur Soldiers

By BOB BOWMAN

In 1745 a force of amateur soldiers sailed from New England to capture the French fortress at Louisburg, Cape Breton. It was one of the strongest in the world, and the project seemed to be ridiculous. However, the Americans (although they were British subjects then) believed in their slogan "No despair while Christ leads" and went on, and they got a number of lucky breaks.

Bowman

First they stopped at Canso, where they were joined by a strong Royal Navy squadron from the West Indies. On May 2 they landed at Freshwater Cove, about six miles west of the fortress, and managed to drive off a force that had been sent to stop them.

Then they got the luckiest break of all. Somehow Colonel Pepperell, commander of the force, was inspired to engage a fisherman by the name of Vaughan to lead a small group of men to the north side of the harbor. They were supposed to keep out of sight and move quietly, but they had no training in warfare and made a great deal of noise. In fact they were so glad to be on land again, and able to stretch their legs, that they kept shouting in what was described as a "scandalous and unprofessional manner."

French soldiers guarding naval stores along the way were so surprised that they fled, after setting fire to the naval supplies. The smoke rolled over the fortress and this caused more panic among another group manning the Royal Battery, which was abandoned without firing a shot.

Fisherman Vaughan was surprised to find the guns deserted, and got his men in place in time to hold the position against a counter-attack.

So the first round was won by the Americans, but the battle did not end until June 17.

Other events on May 2:

1497 — John Cabot sailed from Bristol on a voyage to Canada.

1602 — George Weymouth forced to give up search for Northwest Passage.

1610 — King James I gave part of Newfoundland to John Guy of Bristol.

1670 — Hudson's Bay Company formed.

1826 — Red River area damaged by flood.

1828 — Britain appointed committee to study government of Canada.

1864 — Merchants Bank opened at Halifax.

1881 — CPR broke ground for transcontinental railway at Fort William, Ont.

1882 — Parliament passed Civil Service Bill.

1918 — Civil workers went on strike at Winnipeg.

1962 — Canadian dollar pegged at 92.5 cents (U.S.).

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Jim Reed, age 12, of Daleville, Indiana, for his question:

Is it true that paper is made from wood?

The world's first paper was made from fibrous ingredients such as mulberry leaves, bamboo and used clothing. In Europe, rags were used as the major papermaking ingredient for many centuries. The Canadian pioneer also made their paper from rags. But for the past hundred years, almost all the world's paper has been made from trees.

You can carve your initials on a tree trunk, but its tough wood does not provide a very suitable surface for writing a letter, much less a handkerchief to blow your nose. Nevertheless, about 90 per cent of all our assorted papers are made from wood.

Almost all of it starts out as lofty balsam and hemlock, fir and spruce and other trees that produce softwood lumber. The valuable paper-making ingredient is the cellulose that the tree creates to build its boxy woody cells. About half the content of the wood is cellulose. The rest is an assortment of carbohydrate chemicals and a gummy substance called lignin used to cement the cells in place. In preparing the soupy pulp for making paper, the cellulose must be separated from these other unwanted substances.

Cellulose is a fibrous plant material, though your eyes would not notice this. The tough little fibres are thinner than the hairs on your head and about a hundred times longer than their width. Logs from the forests are usually rafted by water to a pulping mill. Several methods may be used to peel away the unwanted bark. The stripping may be done by hand, using a sharp tool, or by various types of revolving drums equipped with beaver-sharp teeth. The stripped logs are sent by chute to be cut into chips about half an inch thick. The fibres follow the grain of the wood and the chipping machine must slice them in the right direction.

Plant New Trees

Chips of the right size are screened out for processing in the digestors. Here they are dunked into baths of acid or alkaline chemicals and heated by steam piped in from below. This slow cooking is digesting process that frees the cellulose fibres. It takes at least two full hours to heat the brew to 230 degrees Fahrenheit and cooking time may last much longer. This is a rather complex chemical process that depends upon a compound of sulphur. Until it was invented in the 1880s, the manufacture of paper from wood pulp on a large scale was impossible. The digested chips become wood pulp that can be used to manufacture about 7,000 different types of paper—including cardboard, newspaper and tissues for blowing the nose and wiping the brow.

Our four biggest businesses are cars and meat, steel and gasoline. The fifth in size is paper making—and all this paper gobbles up forests of trees. However, our big paper makers have sound ideas for their future and ours. Their slogan is A Tree for a Tree. They aim to plant at least one new tree for each one they harvest, even though it takes years of watching, spraying and tending for them to grow to paper-making size. This is a very cheerful bit of news in the field of conservation.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Edna Jadick, age 12, of East Kildonan, Manitoba, for her question:

Is there really a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow?

This is one of those lovely Irish legends that goes with the leprachauns, the pixies, the pookas and the large assortment of other charming little people. It is nice to think about them, mischief and all. And though nobody can prove that they really exist, nobody can prove either that they don't. It is nice to think that one of the little fellas has buried a pot of golden treasure at the end of the rainbow. And this item is even more impossible to prove right or wrong.

The rainbow, of course, is a colorful arch of glimmering ribbons spanning up and over the sky. Its two ends dip down to the ground—but always at distant points over yonder meadows and hills. And this is the catch. The arc of the rainbow is related to the angles of light reaching your eyes. If you move, these angles change. If you walk toward the rainbow, it moves ahead keeping the distance between you. If there is a pot of gold buried at its feet you could never find it because never-never can you reach the end of the rainbow where digging would have to begin.

Victoria's Drug Revolution—It's Here Now

Hume

A University of Victoria student, editor of the Uvic paper The Martlet, Steve Hume, is working as a Victoria Daily Times' reporter for the summer. He researched and wrote the following story out of a conviction that use of drugs, particularly the hallucinogenic drugs, is spreading among Victoria area young people more rapidly than is generally realized. It is not intended to be a "scare" story; rather it is an account by young people themselves as to why the drug scene is penetrating so deeply, down to the early teen and even pre-teen age groups, and throughout all the economic family levels. All names used are, of course, fictitious. But the people are real — they live, work, go to school and play in this area.

By STEVE HUME

"A man without love is no man at all, but a cold, bitter wind passing by."

The radio is turned up so loud it vibrates, and the kids vibrate with it.

On the wall, carefully lettered with India ink, hand-written poetry covers the faded floral design of the wallpaper along with a clutter of op, pop and straight art from slick magazines and underground newspapers.

You know right away you've got Romantics on your hands.

The thread-bare furniture sags under the disarray of five sprawling figures, but except for one bearded, long-haired youth of 20, all look like typical products of parents and schools in North America's affluent middle-class.

They look like the kid next door in any fairly-well-off residential district.

All of them use drugs, or have recently used drugs, in large and frequent quantities.

Well-fed, well-dressed, they do not fit the stereotyped image of the "dirty, hippie drug-user." But all are deeply involved in the rapidly developing phenomenon of adolescent drug-taking that is rocking the foundations of Canada's accepted social order.

It is, of course, a phenomenon that has the adult world extremely worried.

The greater Victoria School Board distributes information designed to discourage drug use. Police are cracking down with increased vigilance. Parents are confused. Most important, young teen-agers are picking up criminal records at an early age.

And these are youngsters, the B.C. Medical Association points out, who cannot ordinarily be considered as a criminal element.

'Don't Call It a Rebellion'

One of the five kids, lounging on a broken-backed sofa, puts it this way:

"Don't say rebellion; it's a revolution. And don't ask what will happen. It's here right now."

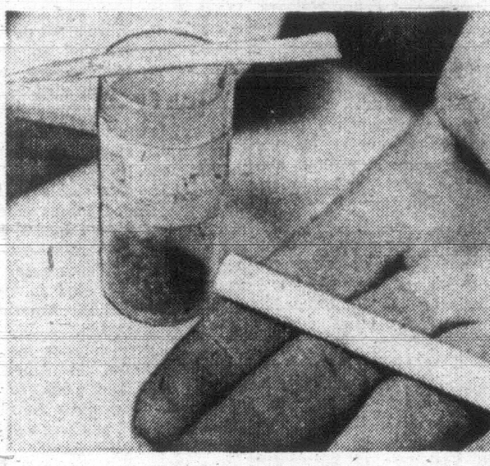
His name is Ted, he is 20 years old, a high school drop-out and he has been a drug user for three years.

Youngest of the quintet is Lee, a 15-year-old junior high school student. She is a bright, pretty youngster, and she's been "turning-on" with drugs since the age of 14.

Don is 16 and a Grade 10 student. He came into the drug scene at Christmas, he says, and claims to have turned on to everything "but the hard stuff."

With more than a touch of pride, he lists them:

Acid (LSD, a powerful hallucinogen); speed, (methedrine, a dangerous amphetamine); hash (hashish, a refined derivative of the marijuana plant); weed (marijuana); mescaline (a mild hallucinogen); STP (one of the most powerful hallucinogens); and cannabinol (synthetic of the active agent in marijuana).



He has not, he says, touched heroin, morphine or cocaine — the narcotic drugs with high addiction potential.

Two of the kids, however, are drop-outs from the drug scene, although both admit to being frequent drug-users previously.

Bill Is 21 and Married

Bill, at 21, is married with a small baby.

An American, he has the charred remnants of his draft and selective service cards carefully preserved in plastic, and he says he was a drug user in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Vancouver before he came to Victoria.

He says he has not touched drugs of any kind since before his marriage.

Mac, 22, is a Victoria boy and a university drop-out from two years ago.

He was, he says , a heavy user of drugs, and at one time was a dealer in hashish. Today he refuses to touch drugs because "they are not a valid alternative to any of the problems I see and face in my life."

All five individuals displayed an uninhibited interest in the idea of talking with a reporter from the Times, and the following interview rambled through the better part of an afternoon and evening.

Times: From your point of view, what is happening with Victoria's drug scene right now?

Ted: Two years ago you could count the number of heads (users) in town, and most of them were in their late teens and early 20s. It was definitely a post-high school thing.

Why Drug Users?

OTTAWA (CP) — What makes a drug taker and what do you do about him? Those are questions Health Minister John Munro wants answered by a government inquiry.

Mr. Munro announced plans for the special inquiry and its terms of reference in the Commons Thursday. Key areas of study will be motivation of drug users and ways the federal government can reduce the problem.

Speaking to reporters outside the chamber, the minister said the problem may be bigger than the public realizes. He said he hopes to launch corrective programs after determining if drug use "has assumed the magnitude we fear it has."

And he made it plain that it isn't only drug use as it relates to youth that he wants studied. Many adults, he said, are given to excessive use of tranquilizers and are becoming drug dependent. The committee would go into that, too.

WANTS YOUTH

The five men or women who will serve on the special inquiry have not yet been selected but Mr. Munro said the accent will be on youth in those picked. The commission probably will have the first member in his early twenties to serve on such a body.

In nearly all respects the inquiry will be a royal commission. The only real difference between the two types of investigation is that the inquiry will report to Mr. Munro whereas a royal commission would report to the prime minister and cabinet.

The main thrust of the inquiry's work will be in the psychological and sociological fields, in pursuit of answers to why people take drugs and what society should do with them.

A good deal of information already is available about the medical and pharmacological aspects of drug use. But the inquiry has been asked to assemble everything it can on the non-medical use of sedative, stimulant, tranquilizing, hallucinogenic and other psychotropic or mind-affecting drugs or substances.

That means a whole range of drugs from LSD to marijuana but will not include the true narcotics such as heroin or opium, which produce physical addiction rather than mental dependence.

MUST KNOW EFFECTS

The inquiry is to report to Mr. Munro on the current state of medical knowledge about the effect of these drugs and substances. Some drugs can seriously damage kidney, liver and other organ tissue.

The inquiry is to make a preliminary report in six months and periodically after that, with a final report to be made within two years.

The inquiry will have a chance during its life to examine the effect of changes to drug laws now before Parliament.

The government has proposed a system of more flexible court handling of marijuana and other narcotics cases, in an effort to prevent attaching the stigma of major crime to irresponsible youngsters caught in possession of drugs.

Wave of Spring Turmoil Shows No Sign of Let-Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Administrators are invoking the rule of law against disruptive students at some of the college campuses in the United States, but the wave of spring turmoil shows little sign of letting up.

Twenty-nine black law students at Columbia University in New York began a sit-in Thursday night in the law school library, less than 12 hours after members of Students for a Democratic Society left two buildings they had seized Wednesday.

About 100 protesters ended a sit-in at Stanford University in Palo Alta, Calif., when 100 policemen were deployed outside the building.

Court orders were served on Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of City College of New York, asking him to show Monday why the 20,000-student school should not be re-opened. It has been closed nine days as black and Puerto Rican students barricade half the campus.

Security guards at Columbia closed the law library after members of the Black American Law Student Association entered the building and said they would hold an all-night "study-in."

DRAMATIZE ATTEMPT

A spokesman for the students said they would not block others from using the library. He said it was called to dramatize their attempt to negotiate grievances "on certain matters concerning institutional policies with respect to black and minority students."

Earlier, about 200 SDS members climbed out the windows of Fayerweather and Mathematics halls, minutes after arrest warrants were issued for them. Many wore bandannas over their faces in an attempt to avoid being identified.

SDS was demanding a larger role for Negroes in admissions procedures and an end to the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps and military recruiting on campus.

●

RADICALS OUSTED

NEW YORK (UPI) — One thousand white students fought 200 Negro militants and ousted them from the Queens College campus today after the blacks had vandalized college buildings for a second day.

Some 300 police surged onto the campus minutes later to keep the peace.

The militants, members of a special ghetto student program known as Search for Education, Enlightenment and Knowledge, had stormed the faculty lounge and smashed windows of the social science building and student cafeteria, forcing cancellation of all afternoon classes at the 24,000-student institution.

The whites gathered at the campus library and applauded speakers who urged them not to let SEEK students "wreck our campus." Then they followed the Negroes across campus edging them toward a gate and shouting "out, out, out!" and, "go, go, go!"

FIVE MINUTES

When the blacks resisted, blows were exchanged, stones were thrown, and one white youth was felled after he was hit by a wooden plank. The fighting lasted about five minutes until the whites managed to shove the blacks out the gate which they closed behind them.

Family Planning Or 'Catastrophe'

Massive Campaign Needed—McNamara

By RICHARD HOMAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a strongly-worded speech on the campus of one of the nation's most traditionalist Catholic universities, World Bank president Robert S. McNamara warned Thursday that a world-wide family planning effort "on a humane but massive scale" is necessary to avoid "catastrophic consequences".

"If there is anything certain about the population explosion, it is that if it is not dealt with reasonably, it will in fact explode: Explode in suffering, explode in violence, explode in inhumanity," McNamara said.

He ruled out coercive population control methods, calling instead for greatly expanded research wider application of present technologies and "above all else," the development of "a ralistic sense of urgency in all countries" over the population problem.

The former U.S. defence secretary delivered his 26-page speech as he recieved an honorary degree at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind.

He noted that "it may seem strange that I should speak at a centre of Catholic thought on this awakward issue," but he had "chosen to discuss the problem because my responsibilities as president of the world bank compel me to be candid about the blunt facts affecting the prospects for global development."

DESPERATE NEED

"The bluntest fact of all," he said, "is that the need for development is desperate."

And, he said, "to put it simply: The greatest single obstacle to the economic and social advancement of the majority of the peoples in the underdeveloped world is rampant population growth."

Rev. Thodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, later called McNamara's address a "thorough, reasoned and nuanced speech on the serious problem for which he has great responsibility." Prolonged applause from the audience of about 800 students and faculty "speaks for itself," Father Hesburg said.

Projections that foresee a time some 650 years in the future when there would be one human being standing on every square foot of land on earth "are, of course, unreal," McNamara said.

But they are unreal, he claimed, only because they will be prevented by one of three developments: "mass starvation, political chaos or population planning."

WILSON THREATENED BY REVOLT

LONDON (AP) — Political sources say an attempt from within the Labor party to replace Prime Minister Wilson may be imminent.

Reports of a plot against Wilson by some of his former cabinet ministers and other back-bench MPs are circulating in the lobbies of the House of Commons and appear today on front pages of most major newspapers.

One report said the rebels were discussing whether to bring a vote of no confidence against the prime minister at an early meeting of the Labor party members in Commons.

The immediate sore point is Wilson's insistence on pushing through Parliament this summer laws to curb the wildcat strikes crippling British exports. The party's traditional cornerstone of political support, the trade union movement, is fighting the legislation tooth and nail.

In Wilson's nearly five years in office plots to replace him have often been reported but never have developed into a real threat.

14-Year Sentence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wilfred Redlac was sentenced today in British Columbia Supreme Court to 14 years for kidnapping Mrs. Dallis Boultbee last May 28. Mrs. Boultbee, 50, estranged wife of wealthy Vancouver realtor E. Leonard Boultbee, was taken bound, gagged and blindfolded from her home.

TORIES SEEK TO CUT CODE CHANGE DEBATE

OTTAWA (CP)—The Conservatives proposed a surprise adjournment of the Commons debate on Criminal Code changes today, in an apparent effort to get the government to devote at least part of the House time to other legislation.

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, introduced the move as the Commons resumed debate on proposed abortion law changes.

Baldwin said he hopes the government will confine Commons consideration of the contentious legislation to a day or two a week, and deal the rest of the time with serious problems such as housing, Indian affairs, agricultural and economic difficulties.

In the recorded vote, the Liberals with the help of the New Democrats easily beat down the Conservatives and Creditistes.

The vote was 97 to 47 with 11 New Democrats voting with the government and 11 Creditistes with the Conservatives.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 154, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditistes 14, Independent 1.

Egypt Plans 'Retaliation'

CAIRO—President Gamal Abdel Nasser has given his troops permission to hit civilian targets within Israel in a retaliation against Israel's commando raid into Egypt Wednesday.

"I am announcing today that, in view of Israeli aggression againt our civilian targets, the whole world must know that we have the right to hit at civilan targets inside Israel," Nasser said in a May Day speech Thursday.

He added that if Egypt did carry out commando raids inside Israeli territory, they would be carefully planned in advance, and cautioned other Arab countries against attacking without definite preparation.

Nasser also branded as a failute an Israeli raid Tuesday night on targets about 300 miles south of Cairo. He said war-planes, not commandos as the Israelis said, attempted the attack. He said the planes were turned back before they could do any significant damage.

This, said Nasser, demonstrated the improvement in Egypt's defence since last Oct. 31, when Israeli commandos damaged bridges, dams and a power plant in the same area.

Nasser said Egyptian shelling across the canal would continue until all the Israeli bases are destroyed. He hinted Egypt might launch a major attempt to re-take the Sinai Desert, saying: "Who could blame us for moving into this land?"

Once more Nasser said that the Arabs "will never give up any land occupied by Israel and particularly not Jerusalem."

"We will not accept that Jerusalem be annexed by Israel," he said. "We will fight to the last drop of our blood for the liberation of Jerusalem."

The Israelis countered Nasser's claims about the raid Tuesday night, saying an area that Egyptian officials showed foreign correspondents was not the target of their attack. An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said the Israeli commandos brought down six power-line towers and the power grid's automatic control centre in attacks near Isna and Naj Hamadi 300 miles south of Cairo.

French Cabinet Sets June 1 for Election

PARIS (CP) — The French cabinet, meeting for the first time since the resignation of Charles de Gaulle as president, decided today to order elections June 1 to pick his successor.

If no candidate gets a majority on the first round, the top two candidates will take part in a run-off election June 15.

Alain Poher, president of the Senate and interim president of the Republic, presided over the cabinet meeting which lasted an hour.

All candidates for the presidential race must submit their petitions to the constitutional council by midnight May 13, and the official campaign will open May 17.

Five candidates have so far announced that they will run for president.

They are former premier Georges Pompidou, Gaston Deferre, Socialist National Assembly leader; Alain Savary, former Socialist minister; Michel Rocard, secretary-general of the small far-left PSU party; and a 50-year-old Normandy builder, Henry Arrett, whose campaign platform is abolition of income tax and establishment of a four-day working week.

Institutional Investors Activity Grows

WASHINGTON (WP) — The impact of institutional investors on the stock market in 1968 was greater than ever before, the Securities and Exchange Commission says.

The activity rate was 29 per cent, compared with 25 per cent in 1967 and 19 per cent in 1966. The activity rate is the average of purchases and sales divided by the average market value of stockholdings at the beginning and end of the year.

The institutional investors collectively bought $38.2 billion worth of common stock, up from the $27.7 billion in 1967.

Mutual funds were the most active, trading close to half of their holdings during the year. Life insurance companies traded more than a quarter of their holdings.

At the end of the year, institutional investors held 37 per cent of the outstanding stock, compared with 31 per cent in 1964 and 25 per cent 10 years ago. Holdings by individuals have had a corresponding decrease.

The effect of institutional stock holding and trading is subject of a major inquiry under way by a special SEC study group.

The flowers are blooming their little heads off, the regional hospital board is dancing around its May-Pole, and out at Victoria - Colquitz postal substation, a language difficulty has arisen.

It began when a new manual of financial procedure for assistant postmasters arrived in the mail this week.

Sub postmaster Kenneth D. Phillips waited for a free moment, then leafed through the manual.

Presently he came on a table of bilingual figures, and ran an eye down it. "One, Un—Two, Deux—Three, Trois"... and so on till he came to a pair that brought him up short.

The French equivalent, "Quarante" for "Forty" was correct, but the corresponding number on the English side was spelled "Fourty."

Then came 'Fourty-one, and eventually, 'Fourty-nine.'

Phillips consulted me on this spelling, but I can find no dictionary authority for it.

Did the Queen's Printer make a marathon error?

Is someone at Ottawa trying to rewrite one of Canada's official languages?

Or (my query) has the Postal Branch dug up an obsolete spelling to match present deliveries?

In Saanich, lovely Saanich, our taxes don't just go up like other peoples'. They go up-up. As a result, many citizens of the overburdened municipality are taking a healthy interest in how their tax dollars are spent.

One of these is a Gordon Head woman who looked out of her window the other morning to see a couple of municipal employees filling in a depressed strip where earth had settled over a storm drain installed a few months ago.

"The men were dropped off at 8:15 a.m.," she reports. "The strip that needed attention was about two feet wide by 40 long. They finished the job about 9:30, but nobody came back to pick them up.

"They didn't have a thing to do until close to noon. Then a truck called around and took them away. I'm not blaming the workmen—it wasn't their fault—but with our taxes going up again, the poor planning higher up irritated me. I simply don't think that our tax money should be wasted like that."

What particularly bugged the lady, she asserts, was the knowledge that the neighboring vacant lot growing up in weeds belongs to the municipality.

"Why," she asks, "couldn't those men have been put to work on the weeds?"

To that question, I'll add another. When is school tax going to be taken off property and related to homeowner's income, where it belongs?

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has announced that the passport office is being beefed up with extra staff, the better to process 12,500 passports a week.

Some of the calls and letters I've been getting from incensed trip-planners indicate that Sharp would do well, to carry the matter farther.

Example: Husband who finally received his passport and found his wife's picture pasted into it. She got his.

Example: The applicant who, when asked to supply a school principal's name as reference, sent a school superintendent's instead. Won't do, came the answer from the red tape jungle. The form asks distinctly for a principal's name. Really!

Here's a suggestion to visitors, and to elderly residents who lack car transport. For a round-trip ride past handsome houses, oak-shaded lawns and a wealth of spring blooms, hop an Uplands bus at Yates and Douglas. It will cost you two 20-cent fares, which it shouldn't. But I think you'll enjoy it.

SEVEN MILLION DOLLARS is being spent by the provincial government on two projects in west - central Saanich municipality. At right is the $2,285,000 vocational school which should be completed by the end of this year. At left, with boilerhouse and laundry completed a year ago, is site for Glendale Hospital. It will contain 300 beds for treatment of retarded children and adults, as well as the physically handicapped. Construction building permit worth $4,914,000 has been issued by Saanich for the work. The vocational school, which will serve southern Vancouver Island, is the first stage of what will be a $4.5 million school.

Revamp Ordered On Voter List By 'Old Gambler'

Premier Bennett Thursday said he had ordered a province-wide enumeration to bring all voters lists up to date within a year.

He added this did not necessarily mean a general election would be held next year but Opposition Leader Tom Berger appeared to take it that way.

"The old gambler has lost his nerve," Berger chuckled after the announcement.

"I think the premier doesn't know whether to call an election or not."

He said it was obvious Bennett "toyed with the idea" of a snap election after the NDP convention elected himself as leader "but then he lost his nerve.

"That was a mistake because the longer he takes the more certain a New Democratic Party victory."

Bennett telephoned the press gallery to make his announcement.

'LOT OF TALK'

"There has been a lot of talk, you know, about an election this year and next year," he said, "and there has been great interest in the province about enumeration of voters.

"We have received a number of requests and, while we have a continuous voters' list that can be brought up to date from time to time, I am giving instructions that this list be brought up to date over the next few months by enumeration.

"I want to answer this publicly because I think these things should be answered publicly.

"I am asking the deputy provincial secretary to have this done over the next 12 months.

"Of course, as well, when an election is called we will open special booths to these lists up to date."

DO IT NOW

(Anyone qualifying can have his name put on the list now by contacting electoral officers in his area but under an enumeration the electoral officers systematically contact the residents of their areas by personal house calls, telephone or mail.)

Bennett was asked if the 12-months length for the enumeration meant there would be no election this year after all.

"No, I'm not saying that at all," he replied. "An election can come anytime but we are doing this (enumeration) now."

He also was asked if the enumeration would take the house-to-house form used by the federal government.

"Whatever the chief electoral officer decides," said the premier.

"He knows the situation and whenever he thinks a door-to-door enumeration is needed, it will be done."

'GOOD THING'

Berger said he welcomed the decision to hold an enumeration but it should be a house-to-house canvass to be as complete as possible.

"I think it will be a good thing to have the voters on the voters' list at last."

He said since the last election the province's population has grown but the total number of voters on the list had declined because it has been allowed to contniue being seriously out of date.

"It is disgraceful that thousands of people were denied the franchise because the lists were not kept up to date," he said.

Heavy Seas Cut Fishermen's Take

Commercial salmon fishermen working off the west coast of Vancouver Island have been hampered by rough seas since the fishing season opened two weeks ago.

But fisheries inspector Harry Granger of Victoria said landings of spring salmon up to April 26 were to within 300 pounds of last year.

Vocational Unit Ready By November

The first phase of a vocational school for lower Vancouver Island will be completed about November but the date classes will open has yet to be set.

Ultimately the school will cost about $4,500,000.

Two buildings now nearing completion on the site north of Wilkinson Road (see photo above) house 10 workshops with class and storage rooms at the rear. The second phase of construction will see them joined by a stores building.

Education Minister Donald Brothers earlier announced the long-sought school will double vocational training facilities in the Greater Victoria area.

The vocational programs now conducted in scattered rented locations in the area will be continued there until the school's second phase goes up. No date for a start on it has been announced.

TWELVE COURSES

Brothers has said the new school will provide training in 12 programs—welding and steel fabrication, automotive repairs, autobody repairs, carpentry and building construction, industrial electricity - electronics marine and stationary diesel engineering, small engine repair and maintenance, upgrade and refresher training in the piping trades, hospital orderly training, cook, waiter, waitress and steward training.

Other programs being considered are navigation upgrading and shipboard safety certification for the marine industry and sales training for the many retail outlets in the area.

MERGER POSSIBLE

More recently the Greater Victoria school board has launched plans for a district college, raising the prospect of some sort of merger between it and the vocational school operation.

During debate on education estimates in March, Brothers said the time has come to study advantages of melding such facilities.

City, Saanich Taking Lead As Building Shoots Ahead

Area Total Up $8.4M In First Four Months

The construction pace on southern Vancouver Island is speeding up.

Hefty boosts from the city and Saanich have lifted the dollar value of building permits in the first four months to $24,202,839, up $8.4 million on the same period last year.

The figures are from Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Central Saanich and Sidney. Figures were not available from North Saanich and Langford-Colwood-Metchosin.

The city again leads the way with permits worth $11.13 million, up $2.87 million over the same period last year. Contributing to the increase were seven apartments worth $3.63 million during April alone.

17 APARTMENTS

So far this year, 17 apartments worth $6.47 million have received building permits.

In Saanich, a single permit last month was worth $4,914,000—for the 300-bed Glendale Hospital. The total for the month was $6.57 million, bringing the total so far this year up to $8.97 million.

Single-family and duplex construction picked up a little in April but remained down for the first four months with 137 dwellings worth $2.96 million against 178 dwellings worth $3.45 million last year.

OAK BAY ZOOMS

Building permit value in Oak Bay has almost quadrupled, to $15 million this year compared with $480,765 in the first four months of last year.

Contributing to this were three apartments worth a total of $662,500 and several school projects worth $377,136.

Esquimalt, Central Saanich and Sidney remained steady.

In Esquimalt, the four-month total was $819,945, down slightly from last year, while Central Saanich was $994,085, up slightly. However, Central Saanich was dominated by extensions to schools worth a total of $688,038 and home construction has declined due to restrictions to curb pollution.

Sidney reported its four-month total at $763,634, compared with $793,286 in the same period last year.

Can a Horse Be Guilty Of Trespass?

A woman found guilty today in central court of allowing her horses to trespass on private property told the magistrate she would rather go to jail than pay a fine.

"I'm not guilty," Phyllis Barcelo, 1530 Stockton, told Magistrate William Ostler.

"I won't pay a fine, I'd rather go to jail."

She was ordered to pay a fine of $10 or serve two days in default.

During her trial court was told two horses belonging to the woman were found on the front lawn of a house on Cedar Hill Road. They had been seen to climb through a fence surrounding some adjacent property where they usually grazed.

Defence counsel Robert Price argued that the charge should be dismissed partially on the grounds that horses couldn't trespass.

INTERESTING POINT

In his judgment the magistrate said that was the most interesting point of the case but ruled against it.

He said he felt the word trespass in the bylaw was being used in a philological sense.

"That appears to saddle the horse with an equinine mens rea (guilty mind or intent)," he said.

As the woman hastily left the court she said to the magistrate, "I'm no more guilty than if your dog looked in a window and you were charged with being a peeping Tom."

The magistrate chose to ignore the remark and Mr. Price paid the fine for his client.

Girls' School May Move To Blenkinsop

One of Victoria's leading private schools may move from the city to a site near Blenkinsop Lake in Saanich.

St. Margaret's School for Girls is now located on Fort Street but the site has been sold.

Municipal planner Tom Loney said there have been preliminary discussions with school officials, but the school has not submitted a rezoning application for the new site.

"It depends on a good deal more than that—sewers for one thing," he added.

The tentative site is just north of Lakehill public school. Council approval would be necessary not only for rezoning but also to tie the girls' school in with the Willow-McBriar secondary sewage treatment plant.

A school spokesman said 30 acres has been bought for the new site.

The plans are, subject to Saanich approval of rezoning and sewers, to spend $250,000 for the school and $250,000 for a residence for boarders.

There is no time limit for the school to vacate its present premises.

BCFP Announces New Manager At Plywood Mill

Walter Pumfrey became new manager of B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Victoria plywood division Thursday with promotion of Rex Humphreys to company headquarters in Vancouver.

BCFP secretary Norman Gish said today Humphreys is named assistant to the vice-president, lumber and plywood, and will be involved in future planning for the company.

Pumfrey, who was plywood sales manager, came to BCFP shortly after leaving University of B.C. and has been involved in every phase of the Victoria mill's development since its construction 17 years ago.

Walter Nelson, manager of the Victoria sawmills division, becomes senior management representative for community relations, a post held by Humphreys since retirement of Bert Barnes four months ago.

1,000 DUE SATURDAY ON CHARTER

More than 1,000 tourists will arrive in Victoria Saturday, but they'll only be in town five hours.

CPR officials said today between 1,000 and 2,000 Boeing Company employees will be on a Princess Marguerite charter cruise from Seattle scheduled to dock in the Inner Harbor at 12:30 p.m

The short-order tourists will reboard the ship later in th afternoon for the return trip to Seattle at 5:30 p.m.

Daily CPR sailings between Seattle and Victoria, which began today, will be suspended in order to accommodate the charter cruise, but will continue Sunday through the next five months.

DR. MARGARET NEWTON
... wheat rust researcher

NEW HONORS FOR SCIENTIST

Dr. Margaret Newton of Victora will return this month to her old Prairie stamping grounds where she made a major contribution to Canada's economy and helped avert famine in many parts of the world.

A pioneer in research to control wheat rust, she will attend the Diamond Jubilee Convocation of the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon on May 13 and receive an honorary doctor of laws degree.

She was on the biology faculty at the university from 1919 to 1925.

Dr. Newton has received many honors for her fundamental research in wheat rust—a fungus which reduces crop yields.

It was the curse of the Prairie provinces before she showed how the disease could be controlled.

MANY TYPES

Her research revealed there were many types of rust and that wheat might be immune to one variety but susceptible to another.

Prior to that it had been accepted that there was only one variety in Canada and the United States. This explained why the early efforts to breed rust-resistant wheat had failed.

Her work had world-wide impact. She was invited by Russia in 1933 to organize a rust research laboratory.

In 1925 she was appointed senior plant pathologist at the newly-established Dominion Rust Research Laboratory in Winnipeg where she remained for 20 years.

AWARDED MEDAL

Here, her work became an indispensable guide to plant breeders in producing wheat varieties resistant to all the races of rust.

For her rust studies, she was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada in 1942 and was presented with the Society's Flavelle Medal in 1946.

The University of Minnesota granted her its outstanding achievement award and gold medal in 1956 and the University of Victoria has named one of its recently completed women's residences in her honor.

GUIDE LEADERS LEARN NEW LOOK

"Early, Early Birds Jump the Gun

By PAT DUFOUR

How would you like to "rise and shine" at 5 a.m. and work right through until 10 p.m.?

Thirty women from all parts of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland are doing that this week . . . and loving every minute of it.

They are Guiders, Brownie and Ranger leaders, commissioners and local Girl Guide Association members attending the first provincial outdoor workshop.

Based at a summer Baptist camp on Lands End Road, overlooking the waters of Colburne Passage, the women arrived Wednesday afternoon and will be here until Sunday afternoon.

NEW LOOK

The workshop is part of a national campaign to give Guiding a new look ... concentrated on the outdoors.

The workshop's program convener, Marjorie Christmas of Duncan, says "We're determined to get people excited about the world we live in and the role we play in it. To do this we must understand our environment."

She explains that the program got under way last August when the first national outdoors workshop was held at a conservation school near Toronto.

"Three of us went from British Columbia, myself and two Guiders from Prince George and Kimberley. They, too, will be organizing workshops within the next few weeks."

This week's program is designed for early risers; so early, that when delegates were out in the fields at 5:30 a.m. Thursday morning for a session of bird watching they had to wait a while before the early bird showed up!

They have reason to be grateful for his tardiness. This morning they were allowed to sleep in until 5:30 a.m. ... and still made a second bird watching session in time.

The main purpose of the workshop is to stress how Guiders can use resource personnel in their districts to help teach Guides to fully appreciate the outdoors.

A battery of experts is giving their time and talents to this week's sessions.

INDIANS COMING

Subjects range from weather, general and forest ecology, protection of plant habitat, to intercidal life, insects, pollution and the preparation needed to take a company or pack on a field trip.

Part of Saturday's program will see members of the Cowichan Indian Band at the camp to show how to knit and card wool, carve totem poles and basket weave.

Many of the women attending have had to hire babysitters to take care of their children, and several, like Mrs. Christmas, have had to forfeit almost a week's wages in order to be here.

Mrs. Christmas reports that each of the delegates attending will go back to their respective divisions and organize similar workshops for Guiders this summer.

Next summer it is hoped that the workshop program will have reached the Guide level.

She adds, "This is the beginning of an ever-growing whirlpool by which we hope to get every youngster in the movement out of the classroom and back to the outdoors.

"If we can do this Guiding will be the full and exciting life that the Baden-Powells foresaw so many years ago."

Victoria's Drug Revolution—It's Here Now

Hume

A University of Victoria student, editor of the Uvic paper The Martlet, Steve Hume, is working as a Victoria Daily Times' reporter for the summer. He researched and wrote the following story out of a conviction that use of drugs, particularly the hallucinogenic drugs, is spreading among Victoria area young people more rapidly than is generally realized. It is not intended to be a "scare" story; rather it is an account by young people themselves as to why the drug scene is penetrating so deeply, down to the early teen and even pre-teen age groups, and throughout all the economic family levels. All names used are, of course, fictitious. But the people are real — they live, work, go to school and play in this area.

By STEVE HUME

"A man without love is no man at all, but a cold, bitter wind passing by."

The radio is turned up so loud it vibrates, and the kids vibrate with it.

On the wall, carefully lettered with India ink, hand-written poetry covers the faded floral design of the wallpaper along with a clutter of op, pop and straight art from slick magazines and underground newspapers.

You know right away you've got Romantics on your hands.

The thread-bare furniture sags under the disarray of five sprawling figures, but except for one bearded, long-haired youth of 20, all look like typical products of parents and schools in North America's affluent middle-class.

They look like the kid next door in any fairly-well-off residential district.

All of them use drugs, or have recently used drugs, in large and frequent quantities.

Well-fed, well-dressed, they do not fit the stereotyped image of the "dirty, hippie drug-user." But all are deeply involved in the rapidly developing phenomenon of adolescent drug-taking that is rocking the foundations of Canada's accepted social order.

It is, of course, a phenomenon that has the adult world extremely worried.

The greater Victoria School Board distributes information designed to discourage drug use. Police are cracking down with increased vigilance. Parents are confused. Most important, young teen-agers are picking up criminal records at an early age.

And these are youngsters, the B.C. Medical Association points out, who cannot ordinarily be considered as a criminal element.

'Don't Call It a Rebellion'

One of the five kids, lounging on a broken-backed sofa, puts it this way:

"Don't say rebellion; it's a revolution. And don't ask what will happen. It's here right now."

His name is Ted, he is 20 years old, a high school drop-out and he has been a drug user for three years.

Youngest of the quintet is Lee, a 15-year-old junior high school student. She is a bright, pretty youngster, and she's been "turning-on" with drugs since the age of 14.

Don is 16 and a Grade 10 student. He came into the drug scene at Christmas, he says, and claims to have turned on to everything "but the hard stuff."

With more than a touch of pride, he lists them:

"JOINT" AND AN ORDINARY CIGARETTE

He has not, he says, touched heroin, morphine or cocaine — the narcotic drugs with high addiction potential.

Two of the kids, however, are drop-outs from the drug scene, although both admit to being frequent drug-users previously.

Bill Is 21 and Married

Bill, at 21, is married with a small baby.

An American, he has the charred remnants of his draft and selective service cards carefully preserved in plastic, and he says he was a drug user in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Vancouver before he came to Victoria.

He says he has not touched drugs of any kind since before his marriage.

Mac, 22, is a Victoria boy and a university drop-out from two years ago.

He was, he says , a heavy user of drugs, and at one time was a dealer in hashish. Today he refuses to touch drugs because "they are not a valid alternative to any of the problems I see and face in my life."

All five individuals displayed an uninhibited interest in the idea of talking with a reporter from the Times, and the following interview rambled through the better part of an afternoon and evening.

Times: From your point of view, what is happening with Victoria's drug scene right now?

Ted: Two years ago you could count the number of heads (users) in town, and most of them were in their late teens and early 20s. It was definitely a post-high school thing.

Why Drug Users?

OTTAWA (CP) — What makes a drug taker and what do you do about him? Those are questions Health Minister John Munro wants answered by a government inquiry.

Mr. Munro announced plans for the special inquiry and its terms of reference in the Commons Thursday. Key areas of study will be motivation of drug users and ways the federal government can reduce the problem.

Speaking to reporters outside the chamber, the minister said the problem may be bigger than the public realizes. He said he hopes to launch corrective programs after determining if drug use "has assumed the magnitude we fear it has."

And he made it plain that it isn't only drug use as it relates to youth that he wants studied. Many adults, he said, are given to excessive use of tranquilizers and are becoming drug dependent. The committee would go into that, too.

WANTS YOUTH

The five men or women who will serve on the special inquiry have not yet been selected but Mr. Munro said the accent will be on youth in those picked. The commission probably will have the first member in his early twenties to serve on such a body.

In nearly all respects the inquiry will be a royal commission. The only real difference between the two types of investigation is that the inquiry will report to Mr. Munro whereas a royal commission would report to the prime minister and cabinet.

The main thrust of the inquiry's work will be in the psychological and sociological fields, in pursuit of answers to why people take drugs and what society should do with them.

A good deal of information already is available about the medical and pharmacological aspects of drug use. But the inquiry has been asked to assemble everything it can on the non-medical use of sedative, stimulant, tranquilizing, hallucinogenic and other psychotropic or mind-affecting drugs or substances.

That means a whole range of drugs from LSD to marijuana but will not include the true narcotics such as heroin or opium, which produce physical addiction rather than mental dependence.

MUST KNOW EFFECTS

The inquiry is to report to Mr. Munro on the current state of medical knowledge about the effect of these drugs and substances. Some drugs can seriously damage kidney, liver and other organ tissue.

The inquiry is to make a preliminary report in six months and periodically after that, with a final report to be made within two years.

The inquiry will have a chance during its life to examine the effect of changes to drug laws now before Parliament.

The government has proposed a system of more flexible court handling of marijuana and other narcotics cases, in an effort to prevent attaching the stigma of major crime to irresponsible youngsters caught in possession of drugs.

Wave of Spring Turmoil Shows No Sign of Let-Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Administrators are invoking the rule of law against disruptive students at some of the college campuses in the United States, but the wave of spring turmoil shows little sign of letting up.

Twenty-nine black law students at Columbia University in New York began a sit-in Thursday night in the law school library, less than 12 hours after members of Students for a Democratic Society left two buildings they had seized Wednesday.

About 100 protesters ended a sit-in at Stanford University in Palo Alta, Calif., when 100 policemen were deployed outside the building.

Court orders were served on Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of City College of New York, asking him to show Monday why the 20,000-student school should not be re-opened. It has been closed nine days as black and Puerto Rican students barricade half the campus.

Security guards at Columbia closed the law library after members of the Black American Law Student Association entered the building and said they would hold an all-night "study-in."

DRAMATIZE ATTEMPT

A spokesman for the students said they would not block others from using the library. He said it was called to dramatize their attempt to negotiate grievances "on certain matters concerning institutional policies with respect to black and minority students."

Earlier, about 200 SDS members climbed out the windows of Fayerweather and Mathematics halls, minutes after arrest warrants were issued for them. Many wore bandannas over their faces in an attempt to avoid being identified.

SDS was demanding a larger role for Negroes in admissions procedures and an end to the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps and military recruiting on campus.

RADICALS OUSTED

NEW YORK (UPI) — One thousand white students fought 200 Negro militants and ousted them from the Queens College campus today after the blacks had vandalized college buildings for a second day.

Some 300 police surged onto the campus minutes later to keep the peace.

The militants, members of a special ghetto student program known as Search for Education, Enlightenment and Knowledge, had stormed the faculty lounge and smashed windows of the social science building and student cafeteria, forcing cancellation of all afternoon classes at the 24,000-student institution.

The whites gathered at the campus library and applauded speakers who urged them not to let SEEK students "wreck our campus." Then they followed the Negroes across campus edging them toward a gate and shouting "out, out, out!" and, "go, go, go!"

FIVE MINUTES

When the blacks resisted, blows were exchanged, stones were thrown, and one white youth was felled after he was hit by a wooden plank. The fighting lasted about five minutes until the whites managed to shove the blacks out the gate which they closed behind them.

Family Planning Or 'Catastrophe'

Massive Campaign Needed—McNamara

By RICHARD HOMAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a strongly-worded speech on the campus of one of the nation's most traditionalist Catholic universities, World Bank president Robert S. McNamara warned Thursday that a world-wide family planning effort "on a humane but massive scale" is necessary to avoid "catastrophic consequences".

"If there is anything certain about the population explosion, it is that if it is not dealt with reasonably, it will in fact explode: Explode in suffering, explode in violence, explode in inhumanity," McNamara said.

He ruled out coercive population control methods, calling instead for greatly expanded research, wider application of present technologies and "above all else," the development of "a realistic sense of urgency in all countries" over the population problem.

The former U.S. defence secretary delivered his 26-page speech as he received an honorary degree at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind.

He noted that "it may seem strange that I should speak at a centre of Catholic thought on this awkward issue", but he had "chosen to discuss the problem because my responsibilities as president of the world bank compel me to be candid about the blunt facts affecting the prospects for global development."

DESPERATE NEED

"The bluntest fact of all," he said, "is that the need for development is desperate."

And, he said, "to put it simply: The greatest single obstacle to the economic and social advancement of the majority of the peoples in the underdeveloped world is rampant population growth."

Rev. Thodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, later called McNamara's address a "thorough, reasoned and nuanced speech on the serious problem for which he has great responsibility." Prolonged applause from the audience of about 800 students and faculty "speaks for itself," Father Hesburg said.

Projections that foresee a time some 650 years in the future when there would be one human being standing on every square foot of land on earth "are, of course, unreal," McNamara said.

But they are unreal, he claimed, only because they will be prevented by one of three developments: "mass starvation, political chaos or population planning."

WILSON THREATENED BY REVOLT

LONDON (AP) — Political sources say an attempt from within the Labor party to replace Prime Minister Wilson may be imminent.

Reports of a plot against Wilson by some of his former cabinet ministers and other backbench MPs are circulating in the lobbies of the House of Commons and appear today on front pages of most major newspapers.

One report said the rebels were discussing whether to bring a vote of no confidence against the prime minister at an early meeting of the Labor party members in Commons.

The immediate sore point is Wilson's insistence on pushing through Parliament this summer laws to curb the wildcat strikes crippling British exports. The party's traditional cornerstone of political support, the trade union movement, is fighting the legislation tooth and nail.

In Wilson's nearly five years in office plots to replace him have often been reported but never have developed into a real threat.

14-Year Sentence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wilfred Redlac was sentenced today in British Columbia Supreme Court to 14 years for kidnapping Mrs. Dallis Boultbee last May 28. Mrs. Boultbee, 50, estranged wife of wealthy Vancouver realtor E. Leonard Boultbee, was taken bound, gagged and blindfolded from her home.

TORIES SEEK TO CUT CODE CHANGE DEBATE

OTTAWA (CP)—The Conservatives proposed a surprise adjournment of the Commons debate on Criminal Code changes today, in an apparent effort to get the government to devote at least part of the House time to other legislation.

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, introduced the move as the Commons resumed debate on proposed abortion law changes.

Baldwin said he hopes the government will confine Commons consideration of the contentious legislation to a day or two a week, and deal the rest of the time with serious problems such as housing, Indian affairs, agricultural and economic difficulties.

In the recorded vote, the Liberals with the help of the New Democrats easily beat down the Conservatives and Creditistes.

The vote was 97 to 47 with 11 New Democrats voting with the government and 11 Creditistes with the Conservatives.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 154, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditistes 14, Independent 1.

Egypt Plans 'Retaliation'

Times News Services

CAIRO—President Gamal Abdel Nasser has given his troops permission to hit civilian targets within Israel in a retaliation against Israel's commando raid into Egypt Wednesday.

"I am announcing today that, in view of Israeli aggression againt our civilian targets, the whole world must know that we have the right to hit at civilian targets inside Israel," Nasser said in a May Day speech Thursday.

He added that if Egypt did carry out commando raids inside Israeli territory, they would be carefully planned in advance, and cautioned other Arab countries against attacking without definite preparation.

Nasser also branded as a failure an Israeli raid Tuesday night on targets about 300 miles south of Cairo. He said war*planes, not commandos* as the Israelis said, attempted the attack. He said the planes were turned back before they could do any significant damage.

This, said Nasser, demonstrated the improvement in Egypt's defence since last Oct. 31, when Israeli commandos damaged bridges, dams and a power plant in the same area.

Nasser said Egyptian shelling across the canal would continue until all the Israeli bases are destroyed. He hinted Egypt might launch a major attempt to re-take the Sinai Desert, saying: "Who could blame us for moving into this land?"

Once more Nasser said that the Arabs "will never give up any land occupied by Israel and particularly not Jerusalem."

"We will not accept that Jerusalem be annexed by Israel," he said. "We will fight to the last drop of our blood for the liberation of Jerusalem."

The Israelis countered Nasser's claims about the raid Tuesday night, saying an area that Egyptian officials showed foreign correspondents was not the target of their attack. An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said the Israeli commandos brought down six power-line towers and the power grid's automatic control centre in attacks near Isna and Naj Hamadi 300 miles south of Cairo.

French Cabinet Sets June 1 for Election

PARIS (CP) — The French cabinet, meeting for the first time since the resignation of Charles de Gaulle as president, decided today to order elections June 1 to pick his successor.

If no candidate gets a majority on the first round, the top two candidates will take part in a run-off election June 15.

Alain Poher, president of the Senate and interim president of the Republic, presided over the cabinet meeting which lasted an hour.

All candidates for the presidential race must submit their petitions to the constitutional council by midnight May 13, and the official campaign will open May 17.

Five candidates have so far announced that they will run for president.

They are former premier Georges Pompidou, Gaston Deferre, Socialist National Assembly leader; Alain Savary, former Socialist minister; Michel Rocard, secretary-general of the small far-left PSU party; and a 50-year-old Normandy builder, Henry Arrett, whose campaign platform is abolition of income tax and establishment of a four-day working week.
